I. PURPOSE

The purpose of this policy is to provide the members of this department with clearly articulated expectations of their performance relative to employment with the City of Redmond and the Redmond Police Department.

II. POLICY

A. Preamble

Whereas, peace officers are vested with a public trust which requires that they consistently demonstrate the highest degree of integrity and good moral character; and Whereas, the need to maintain high standards of moral character, integrity, knowledge, and trust is advanced by the establishment of Standards of Conduct for members of the law enforcement profession; Whereas, the establishment of Standards of Conduct, which includes a Code of Ethics, Canons of Ethics, Oath of Office, Mission Statement and Minimum Standards, requires the granting of authority to enforce these standards of professional conduct through disciplinary action as necessary for the protection of the health, welfare and safety of the public; therefore the need to maintain high standards of moral character, integrity, knowledge, and trust require that members of the Law Enforcement Profession establish and conform to Standards of Conduct.

B. General statement

Members of the law enforcement profession are granted a public trust which requires they consistently demonstrate the highest degree of integrity. To be worthy of this public trust, and to ensure that their professional conduct is above reproach, members of the law enforcement profession must conform to these Standards of Conduct and must abide by these Canons of Ethics, adopted as a means of internal regulation.

The essence of a profession is that it requires, in addition to prescribing a desired level of performance, established minimum standards of ethical conduct with prescribed rules for internal discipline to ensure compliance. Accordingly, these Standards of Conduct have been established for the law enforcement profession.
Nothing in the Standards of Conduct is intended to limit or supersede any provision of law relating to the duties and obligations of peace officers or the consequences of a violation thereof. Where these rules specify certain conduct as unprofessional, this is not to be interpreted as approval of conduct not specifically mentioned.

Nothing in the Standards of Conduct is intended to limit the authority of this agency to adopt and enforce rules and regulations that are more stringent or comprehensive than those that are contained here.

Standards of Conduct are established with the belief they are reasonably related to the business needs of the Redmond Police Department. Business need is generally, but not exclusively described as the type of performance that can be expected for the orderly, efficient, effective and safe operation of the department. Additionally, because we, in policing, are obligated by our oath to affect the rules of a civilized society, it is reasonable that we be held to the highest of standards in our professional and personal conduct. The enormity of potential situations in which a member may become involved then, requires extensive discussion to define acceptable and unacceptable conduct. It is the policy of this department therefore, to provide clear written direction of expected and prohibited activities by members of this agency.

III. DEFINITIONS

Whatever I see or hear of a confidential nature or that is confided to me in my official capacity will be kept ever secret unless revelation is necessary in the performance of my duty."

"I will never act officiously or permit personal feelings, prejudices, animosities, or friendships to influence my decisions. With no compromise for crime and with relentless prosecution of criminals, I will enforce the law courteously and appropriately without fear or favor, malice or ill will, never employing unnecessary force or violence and never accepting gratuities."

IX. PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT
As most police work is necessarily performed without close supervision, the responsibility for the proper performance of an officer's duty lies primarily with the officer. An officer carries a responsibility for the safety of the community and fellow officers. An officer discharges that responsibility by the faithful and diligent performance of any assigned duty. Anything less violates the trust placed in the officer by the people, and nothing less qualifies as professional conduct. In the performance of this duty to serve society, an officer is often called upon to make difficult decisions. The officer must exercise discretion in situations where his/her rights and liabilities and those of the department hinge upon the officer's conduct and judgment. An officer's decisions are not easily made, and occasionally they involve a choice which may cause the member hardship or discomfort. An officer must be faithful to the oath of office, the principles of professional police service, and the objectives of the department; and in the discharge of duty s/he must not allow personal motives to govern his/her decisions and conduct.

A. Respect for Constitutional Rights

No person has a constitutional right to violate the law; neither may any person be deprived of constitutional rights merely because the person is suspected of having committed a crime. The task of determining the constitutionality of a statute lies with an appellate court of proper jurisdiction, not with an officer who seeks to properly enforce the law as it exists.

Therefore, an officer may enforce any federal, state, or local statute which is valid on its face without fear of abrogating the constitutional rights of the person violating that statute. An officer who lawfully acts within the scope of authority does not deprive persons of their civil liberties. The officer may within the scope of authority make reasonable inquiries, conduct investigations, and arrest on probable cause. However, when an officer exceeds authority by unreasonable conduct, the officer violates the sanctity of the law which s/he is sworn to uphold.

B. Integrity

The public demands the integrity of its law enforcement officers be above reproach, and the dishonesty of a single officer may impair public confidence and cast suspicion upon the entire department. Succumbing to even minor temptation can be the genesis of a malignancy which may ultimately destroy an individual’s effectiveness and may contribute to the corruption of countless others. An officer must scrupulously avoid any conduct which might compromise the integrity of himself/herself, his/her co-workers or the department.

C. Courtesy

Effective law enforcement depends on a high degree of cooperation between the department and the public it serves. The practice of courtesy in all public contacts encourages understanding and appreciation; discourtesy breeds contempt and resistance. The majority of the public are law abiding citizens who rightfully expect fair and courteous treatment by department employees. While the urgency of a situation might preclude the ordinary social amenities, discourtesy under any circumstances is indefensible. The practice of courtesy by an officer is not a manifestation of weakness; it is, on the contrary, entirely consistent with the firmness and impartiality that characterizes a professional police officer.

Revised: 03/08/12

D. Truthfulness

Members shall be truthful when testifying, making reports, or conducting any other department business. There may be a valid business necessity during undercover operations when this article would be non-applying conduct. Members shall not deliberately make a false or misleading statement to a supervisor or fellow employee.

E. Conforming to Policy

Members shall not establish a pattern of behavior that deviates from department directives, policies, or procedures nor behavior in a pattern that is significantly different from the compliance rates of other members. Members shall not challenge policies, procedures, or practices without providing objective and documented facts, in writing, to support justification for such challenge unless the operational situation justifies such action.

F. Compliance with Lawful Orders

The department is an organization with a clearly defined hierarchy of authority. This is necessary because unquestioned obedience of a superior's lawful command is essential for the safe and prompt performance and the positive encouragement of a willingness to serve. However, negative discipline may be necessary where there is a willing disregard of lawful commands, orders or directives.

G. Investigative Procedures

1. Peace officers, including department members, under investigation for an alleged violation of any of these standards or department rules shall be afforded, at a minimum, the rights established by law, labor agreement, and department procedure to ensure fair and just treatment in the enforcement of disciplinary rules of conduct or similar expectations.

2. Exercise of Rights: By reason of the lawful exercise of rights, officers/members shall not be discharged, disciplined, demoted, transferred, or denied promotion or reassignment, or discriminated against with regard to employment, nor threatened with any such action.
3. Criminal Investigations: When the investigation focuses on an officer for prosecution of a crime, the officer/member shall be afforded the same constitutional rights, privileges, or guarantees enjoyed by any person. Nothing shall prevent the department from pursuing an investigation administratively when it is warranted.

H. Agency Appeal or Review Process

To ensure due process, officers/members shall be provided with an internal administrative appeal or review process or procedure, established by the department.
