

We could have sworn...

They took an oath. "To preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States." Right?

President Bush and Attorney General Alberto Gonzales have authorized unconstitutional and illegal spying on Americans.

Now they are dodging the tough questions. And, it's not just Democrats who are asking:

"We...express our profound concern about recent revelations that the U.S. government may have engaged in domestic electronic surveillance without appropriate legal authority."

— Republican U.S. Senators Chuck Hagel (NE) and Olympia Snowe (ME)

"Even in a time of war, you have to follow the process, because that's what a democracy is all about: a process."

— Republican U.S. Senator Lindsey Graham (SC)

"If the government is willing to bend the rules on this issue, how are we supposed to believe it won't abuse the powers granted by the Patriot Act?"

— Republican U.S. Rep. C.L. "Butch" Otter (ID)

The President is spying on Americans without a warrant.

And Congress must act.
