This is the ACLU Design Handbook.
This handbook is the next step in the ACLU’s ever-evolving journey as we dare to create a more perfect union. Our new visual identity is an expression of who we are and how we want to change our country.

We express ourselves visually as well as verbally. This handbook gives us visual tools we all can use to communicate effectively. Its companion, the tone of voice guide, offers verbal tools to do the same.

This work is for everyone, no matter who you are or what you do. With these resources, everyone at the ACLU will be able to share our messages and tell our clients’ stories like never before.
Contents

4     Introduction

12    IDEAS
       What our visual identity means

14    We Are Resolute
16    We Are Patriotic
18    We Are Historic
20    We Are Serious
22    We Are Layered
24    We Are Together

26    EXAMPLES
       The visual identity at work

28    Social Graphics
38    Campaigns and Series
42    Videos
46    Reports
50    Newsletters
52    Advertisements
56    Posters and Protest Signs
60    Direct Mail
62    Merchandise
How to make things

Logos
National and affiliate logos, brand architecture

Color
Palette, suggested combinations

Typography
Typefaces, text boxes, tagline

Tone of Voice
Quest, tagline, and brand voice

Images
Photos, illustrations, and information graphics

Layout
Layering and composition

Campaigns and Series
Creating print, digital, and video series

INDEX
We are living in the Divided States of America. Political, economic, and cultural divides are widening. Fatalism is rampant.

Enter the ACLU.
Our Story

The ACLU is an organization of people who believe in the power of action. Whether in the courts, statehouses, or Congress, we fight to defend the rights that the Constitution guarantees to all of us — regardless of who we are, where we come from, whom we love, or what we believe. Together we take up the toughest civil liberties challenges of our time. We seek to be the place where people can come, no matter their political affiliation, to courageously take action. We seek to inspire those who want change to become the ones who make change.

Today, people who are interested in supporting the ACLU do so primarily donating money. And while money is obviously important, people want to do more. People don’t want to just support our actions; they want to take their own. And we want that too. Because of this, we’re expanding what it means to be an ACLU member and supporter. We’re evolving from an organization of lawyers and advocates fighting for the people into a larger coalition of people fighting for what’s right together — for all of us.

We seek to be the place where people can come, no matter their political affiliation, to courageously take action. We seek to inspire those who want change to become the ones who make change.

This isn’t about one person. It isn’t about one party. It’s not about taking sides. It’s about all of us, coming together to make change happen.

We the people dare to create a more perfect union.
Introduction
The ACLU is a group of people working to make change. We are not a corporation. It makes sense that for many years, the ACLU had no marketing, no advertising, no design, and not even a logo. The Statue of Liberty was our only symbol. Why do we — a team of lawyers, policy advocates, and communicators working to advance social change — need to think about branding and marketing?

ACLU symbols from the 1930s through the 1950s.
In the second half of the 20th century, as visual culture in America evolved, so did the visual communications coming from the ACLU. People working all over the country created their own logos and posters and t-shirts, all with their own ways of thinking about the ACLU. That work was exciting. It was exuberant. Looking back now, it may seem visually disjointed — dedicated people moving in many different directions.
In 2002, the ACLU became visually united for the first time. That system, featuring an iconic depiction of Lady Liberty and a newly consistent design, brought the ACLU up to date with the visual culture of the time.

National and affiliate logos from the identity system launched in 2002 (designed by a team led by Sylvia Harris, Fo Wilson, and Leila Taylor).

Since then, as technology has evolved, so has our culture. Not only do we encounter more visual imagery than ever before, but also we see it in more places. Social marketing and social media emerged. Today, non-profits like the ACLU use visual marketing to change perceptions and shift conversations.
At this time in history (and this time in the ACLU’s history), it’s more important then ever to reach out to as many people as possible in as many ways as possible. We must always talk to those who disagree with us, those who have never heard of us, and those who continue to stand with us.

The visual identity in this handbook is bold, colorful, and dynamic. It’s engaging and flexible enough to work on every kind of page and screen. But it is also as meaningful as it can possibly be. We want to reach more people while always staying true to our values.

Some call this branding. But we call it our identity. With the tools in this handbook, we are not just expressing ourselves. We can engage new and broader audiences in our work — as we, the people, dare to create a more perfect union.
IDEAS

What our visual identity means
Everything that we do at the ACLU comes out of values that we all share. That often means interpreting the Constitution — and drawing on our experience and expertise to take meaningful action.

With the guidelines in this handbook and the tone of voice guide, each of us can use the skills we have to make our communications better — whether we are publishing a report or making a protest sign or designing an ad.

The ACLU visual identity is built on a foundation of ideas that give meaning to our design choices. This section of the handbook is an introduction to those ideas and the thinking behind them.
right
Our inspiration: protest signs like these from the Civil Rights Movement opposite

Declarations in the GT America type family

WE ARE RESOLUTE

Like generations of changemakers before us, we are firm in our convictions. We make bold and defiant statements, and we want them to be heard. This family of typefaces (called GT America), makes our messages clear and assured. Its many styles embrace a variety of voices while staying unified.
I AM A DREAMER.
LETS ME DREAM.

TIME TO ROLL UP OUR SLEEVES.
WE KNOW OUR RIGHTS.

NEVERTHELESS, WE PERSISTED.
DISSENT IS PATRIOTIC.

SEPARATE IS NEVER EQUAL.
WE SHALL OVERCOME.
America is home to many different people and ideas. We honor our past, but we keep moving forward. We are inspired by movements throughout history that have adapted patriotic symbols to celebrate more nuanced perspectives and experiences. We do the same. We are not just red, white and blue. We are red, everything, and blue.
The ACLU has made history for nearly a century — and together with our members and supporters, we continue to make history every day. Taking inspiration from historical engravings, this distinctive image treatment pays tribute to our past while capturing the energy (and embracing the technology) of today.
WE ARE SERIOUS

We create change through litigation, advocacy, and communications. We back up everything we stand for with analysis and expertise. This typeface, Century, adds an authoritative and informational tone to our communications. It’s a classic workhorse of American typography — and it just so happens to be the typeface required by law for all Supreme Court briefs.
The campaign to “ban the box”—eliminating criminal record questions on job applications—was spearheaded by the All of Us or None organization more than a decade ago. The policy does not exclude the use of criminal background checks or discussion of criminal histories. Rather, it encourages employers to eliminate blanket exclusions of people with criminal records, delaying criminal history inquiries until later in the hiring process, and ensuring that information about an applicant’s criminal record is considered in a job-related context.

As of May 2017, 28 states and more than 150 cities and counties have passed some form of “ban the box” legislation. While most of these laws apply only to public sector employment, the policies extend to private sector employers in nine states and 15 major cities. In cities that have adopted fair chance policies, job opportunities with criminal histories have expanded significantly. When Minneapolis banned “ban the box” in 2007, more than 50 percent of job seekers with criminal convictions, whose records were previously marked as a “concern,” were hired for public employment in the first year. In Durham, North Carolina, 96 percent of those with criminal records applying for city jobs were recommended for hire.

While the track record with “ban the box” has been promising, this policy alone isn’t sufficient to end discrimination if employers make assumptions that applicants of color are more likely to have a criminal record.

In states that allow broader liability for negligent hiring, the Federal Bonding Program can help shield employers for individuals who, despite a criminal history or past drug addiction, are otherwise qualified for the position. This allows employers to hire and assess an individual’s skills without the risk of liability. If a company decides to retain the employee after the six-month period, it can apply for private bonding insurance that would not have been available without the certification of the Federal Bonding Program. The program has been successfully used in 50,000 job placements.
WE ARE LAYERED

Our country has many voices. Likewise, the ACLU represents many people and many issue areas. Our visual identity is inclusive, too. It’s built on this idea: We can be a team without being the same. We celebrate these differences and layers, but we remain grounded in the values we share.
KNOW YOUR RIGHTS
WE’RE STRONG
The ACLU logo, partially inspired by one from our history, expresses a very simple idea that anyone can understand, regardless of our culture or experience or identity or point of view. And that shared understanding helps all of us stand together. This is not a new idea. But it is a powerful one. Out of many, we are one.
EXAMPLES

The visual identity at work
Even with a shared set of values and visual ideas that represent them, there are many ways to use the elements of our system. And while our visual identity encourages freedom, we also need to speak with a strong, unified voice.

This section of the handbook is full of examples of how our ideas can be put into action in the form of sample items like social posts, video graphics, and campaigns, among others. They are here to help and inspire you.

You’ll see that like the ACLU itself, these samples are diverse, but they have some things in common. They are bold. They speak clearly. They are dynamic. And they are both accessible and surprising.
Social Graphics

This is ACLU red and ACLU light orange. See p. 90 and 152 for more on colors and combinations.

IMMIGRANTS
WELCOME
VICTORY

This is ACLU red and ACLU light orange. See p. 90 and 152 for more on colors and combinations.

A slightly angled text box creates a feeling of energy and movement. Overlapping the headline shows depth, but make sure everything is readable.
This is a social post about winning an important court case. We want to capture the mood: celebratory, energized, and assured.

Do the colors show who we are? p. 90
ACLU red and ACLU light orange are a bright, punchy combination.

Do the images tell engaging stories? p. 128
Lady Liberty is a natural choice. And the modern engraving treatment makes it distinctive.

Is the typography clear and confident? p. 102
This headline is a bold declaration, so it’s in GT America, in all caps.

Is the layout dynamic and multilayered? p. 148
The layered image, headline, and “victory” create depth and texture. It’s a chorus of voices celebrating, not a dour pronouncement.

Is our voice purposeful and consistent? p. 124
Our headline communicates a victory in plain language. It’s upbeat but doesn’t exaggerate.

Are we properly identified? p. 68
This is the national logo. The blue version ensures that we follow the “red, something else, and blue” rule. See p. 92. for more.
After the execution drugs were injected, Joseph Wood repeatedly gasped for one hour and 40 minutes before death was pronounced.

George W. Bush authorized torture and secret detention facilities overseas.

Specific color values and sample color palettes are shown starting on p. 90. Our palette encompasses light and dark colors for different moods and tones.
celebratory/positive posts

Premade templates of a few standard posts are available. See p. 156.
posts that inspire people

INJUSTICE ANYWHERE IS A THREAT TO JUSTICE EVERYWHERE

Martin Luther King, Jr.

PREJUDICE REWRITTEN IS STILL PREJUDICE.

#NOBANNOWALL

NOT NOW. NOT EVER.

#NOMUSLIMREGISTRY

For more on selecting and using photos, see p. 128.
HAVE YOUR RIGHTS BEEN VIOLATED WHILE TRAVELING?

- Has a customs officer or border agent questioned you about your religion or your political beliefs?
- Has a customs officer or border agent searched or confiscated your laptop or mobile phone, or asked you to provide your laptop password or unlock your mobile phone?
- Has a airline employee questioned you about your religion or political beliefs?
- Have you been denied boarding on a flight returning to the United States?
- Have you been questioned by U.S. law enforcement officers abroad about your religion or political beliefs?

IF SO, CONTACT YOUR ACLU AFFILIATE AT ACLU.ORG/AFFILIATES

“Handing control of prisons over to for-profit companies is a recipe for abuse and neglect. The memo from Attorney General Sessions ignores this fact.

“Additionally, this memo is a further sign that under President Trump and Attorney General Sessions, the United States may be headed for a new federal prison boom, fueled in part by criminal prosecutions of immigrants for entering the country.”

David C. Fathi
Director,
ACLU National Prison Project

posts that inform people

Keep text brief. But if you must include a lot, break it into columns. And use GT America Regular; it’s the most legible at small sizes. (It’s not clear here because this example is shown at a reduced size to demonstrate layout.) See p. 102 for more on type.

Posts with this much text can’t be boosted on Facebook. Use their tool to test your image before posting:
facebook.com/ads/tools/text_overlay
Court grants request to keep Kentucky’s last abortion clinic open, for now.

Kentucky is trying to ban abortion by threatening to close the last abortion clinic in the state.

To learn how to make and use these text boxes, see p. 112.
Arkansas politicians have tried to:
• ban safe abortion care
• violate patient privacy
• interfere with women’s decisions

We can fight back. Join us. #StopAbortionBans

We won’t stop fighting. No Muslim ban ever.

WE MARCH!
9AM AT LOWER SENATE PARK

The Statue of Liberty is no longer part of our logo, but you can still use images of her in your materials. See p. 142.
Facebook social media profiles

Facebook profile: facebook.com/aclu
- ACLU National
- The American Civil Liberties Union
- Home
- About
- Videos
- Photos
- Take Action
- Nice to Meet You
- Poll

Facebook profile: facebook.com/aclu_fl
- ACLU of Florida
- Home
- About
- Events
- Photos
- Videos
- Reviews
- Likes

Examples

DISSENT IS PATRIOTIC

As President-elect Trump assumes the nation's highest office, we urge him to reconsider and change course on unconstitutional campaign promises. These include a plan to amass a deportation force to remove 11 million undocumented immigrants; ban the entry of Muslims into our country and permanently exclude them; and cut off safety for immigrants.

We are here because health is a right!
Twitter social media profiles

Examples
69% of Americans do not want Roe v. Wade overturned.

EVERY WOMAN, EVERY STATE

What we can do to ensure that the right to abortion remains legal and accessible.

The American Civil Liberties Union

is the nation's largest public interest law firm. More than a dozen projects within the national ACLU focus on specific issues. These include the LGBT and HIV Project, which works to advance the rights of trans persons across the U.S. through litigation, legislative and policy advocacy, and public education.

Read more at www.aclu.org/lgbt-rights/

ACLU of Iowa is the state affiliate of the national ACLU. The ACLU of Iowa has worked for decades to advance LGBT rights, filing the first lawsuit seeking to recognize marriage equality in Iowa in 1976. The ACLU of Iowa also works toward LGBT rights in the Iowa legislature and through public education.

Questions? Contact the ACLU of Iowa with your transgender questions at legal.program@aclu-ia.org (preferred) or at 515-243-3576.

Name Change & Identity Documentation

In Iowa, you may change your legal name by filing a petition in court. By submitting that court order and other documentation, you can change the name and gender marker on other documents, including your birth certificate, driver’s license or non-operator’s ID card, Social Security documents, passport, citizenship and immigration documents, financial records, etc.

For a detailed how-to guide on changing your name and gender marker on your identification in Iowa, see Len Sandler et al., "The Iowa Guide to Changing Legal Identity Documents," University of Iowa LGBTQQ Health Clinic (April 2014) http://www.uilgbtqclinic.com/for-patients.html

Adoption and Foster Care

You cannot be denied or turned away from adoption or foster opportunities, nor otherwise discriminated against in the provision of these services, on the basis of your gender identity.

Hate Crimes Protection

Iowa law does not include "gender identity" within its hate crimes provisions, but under federal law, crimes targeting transgender people may be subject to federal prosecution and greater penalties.

Legal Rights of Prisoners

There is little Iowa-specific law on this issue, but federal law requires prisons and jails to make individualized decisions about where trans prisoners can be safely housed. Denial of medical care for gender dysphoria may violate the U.S. and Iowa Constitutions.

For more information on transgender rights in Iowa, including our 22-page booklet, go to www.aclu-ia.org.
A campaign must look coherent across platforms while still fitting in with all ACLU communications. See p. 158 for more.

Do the colors show who we are? p. 90
We’ve chosen a subset of colors from the ACLU palette: red, blue, and light yellow.

Do the images tell engaging stories? p. 128
These materials should be a quick read, so they’re best left simple, with no image.

Is the typography clear and confident? p. 102
We’ve chosen a subset of typefaces from the ACLU’s set: GT America Compressed Regular and Compressed Bold. For each campaign, choose a signature typeface and use it for all headlines and text boxes.

Is the layout dynamic and multilayered? p. 148
Our text is set flush left. And text boxes are layered, angled, and placed off center.

Is our voice purposeful and consistent? p. 124
Knowledge is power. No need to editorialize.

Are we properly identified? p. 68
Yes. The national logo appears on most pieces, and an affiliate logo can be used for local items.
The American Civil Liberties Union is the nation's largest public interest law firm. More than a dozen projects within the national ACLU focus on specific issues. These include the LGBT and HIV Project, which works to advance the rights of transgender persons across the U.S. through litigation, legislative and policy advocacy, and public education. Read more at www.aclu.org/lgbt-rights/discrimination-against-transgender-people.

ACLU of Iowa is the state affiliate of the national ACLU. The ACLU of Iowa has worked for decades to advance LGBT rights, filing the first lawsuit seeking to recognize marriage equality in Iowa in 1976. The ACLU of Iowa also works toward LGBT rights in the Iowa legislature and through public education.

Questions? Contact the ACLU of Iowa with your transgender questions at legal.program@aclu-ia.org (preferred) or at 515-243-3576.

Name Change & Identity documentation

In Iowa, you may change your legal name by filing a petition in court. By submitting that court order and other documentation, you can change the name and gender marker on other documents, including your birth certificate, driver's license or non-operator's ID card, Social Security documents, passport, citizenship and immigration documents, financial records, etc.

For a detailed how-to guide on changing your name and gender marker on your identification in Iowa, see Len Sandler et al., "The Iowa Guide to Changing Legal Identity Documents," University of Iowa LGBTQQ Health Clinic (April 2014) http://www.uilgbtqclinic.com/for-patients.html

Adoption and Foster Care

You cannot be denied or turned away from adoption or foster opportunities, nor otherwise discriminated against in the provision of these services, on the basis of your gender identity.

Hate Crimes Protection

Iowa law does not include "gender identity" within its hate crimes provisions, but under federal law, crimes targeting transgender people may be subject to federal prosecution and greater penalties.

Legal Rights of Prisoners

There is little Iowa-specific law on this issue, but federal law requires prisons and jails to make individualized decisions about where trans prisoners can be safely housed. Denial of medical care for gender dysphoria may violate the U.S. and Iowa Constitutions.

For more information on transgender rights in Iowa, including our 22-page booklet, go to www.aclu-ia.org.

CRUEL AND UNUSUAL PUNISHMENT

The case against the death penalty

After the execution drugs were injected, Joseph Wood repeatedly gasped for one hour and 40 minutes before death was pronounced.

CRUEL AND UNUSUAL

END THE DEATH PENALTY
Stick with a consistent image theme and style to tie the campaign together.

See p. 158 for a fuller discussion about how to create a campaign or series.
Our support comes from every state in the country. We’re ready.

This is one of our two official “end cards” that close every video. See p. 45 for more.
Our visual identity applies to videos, too.

Do the colors show who we are? p. 90
Put names, locations, and other explanations in text boxes for clarity. Keep color consistent throughout your video.

Do the images tell engaging stories? p. 128
Keep your videos active by interweaving detail shots and wider views of the scene.

Is the typography clear and confident? p. 102
Text can be in GT America or Century, depending on your tone.

Is the layout dynamic and multilayered? p. 148
Keep text off center, and look for camera angles that frame the scene asymmetrically.

Is our voice purposeful and consistent? p. 124
As with our written communications, focus on solutions to problems and avoid hyperbole.

Are we properly identified? p. 68
It’s important to keep the ACLU logo visible throughout your video. This is sometimes called a “bug.” Ours is the white logo in the upper-right corner. Keep this consistent across all ACLU videos. (See p. 166.)
The Texas State Senate just passed SB6.

If you don’t know your history, you’re bound to repeat it.

Lower third
These are used to add names, locations, and other explanations. Put them in a box for clarity.

Captions
These are in GT America Regular. It’s the easiest to read. If the background is busy, add a black outline or a text box.

For thumbnails, the logo should be in the upper-left corner and can be blue or red since it is on a fixed background.
end cards

Standard end card
This should close most videos. We use it for explainers and short animations.

Alternate end card
Use this for serious, documentary-style videos, when an upbeat end card would feel inappropriate.

Examples
War Comes Home

The Excessive Militarization of American Policing

Breaking the subtitle over two lines gives it a little breathing room.
This report is highly researched and needs to communicate seriousness of purpose without looking dull or intimidating.

Do the colors show who we are? p. 90
ACLU dark navy is serious. Adding blue, red, and light orange keeps it from looking drab.

Do the images tell engaging stories? p. 128
This stock photo nicely communicates the danger at hand. The modern engraving treatment makes it feel like a custom illustration.

Is the typography clear and confident? p. 102
We’re speaking in a highly informational voice in this report, so Century Schoolbook it is.

Is the layout dynamic and multilayered? p. 148
Layering and asymmetry ensure that this report doesn’t look stodgy or plain.

Is our voice purposeful and consistent? p. 124
The headline is clear and vivid. It’s neither too wordy nor overly clever.

Are we properly identified? p. 68
This is the national logo. The red version stands out clearly against the background.
report covers

The Trump Memos
The ACLU’s Constitutional Analysis of the Public Statements and Policy Proposals of Donald Trump

Access Denied
Patients and Physicians Speak Out About Catholic Hospitals and the Threat to Women’s Health and Lives

You Are Being Tracked
How License Plate Readers Are Being Used to Record Americans’ Movements

Liberty, Justice, Equality
The ACLU of Northern California’s 2014 Annual Report

48 Examples
Over the past decade, school police have become a common presence on school campuses. Some school police have a broadly defined mission, such as law enforcement and security, while others focus more narrowly on school safety. In California, school police departments are often part of local law enforcement agencies, such as county or municipal police departments. These agencies may have a formal agreement with the local school district to provide police services on school campuses, or they may provide services on a more informal basis. In some cases, school police officers may be sworn law enforcement officers, while in other cases, they may be civilians, such as school security officers or school resource officers.

In California, school police departments may be responsible for a variety of tasks, including maintaining order, responding to incidents, and providing assistance to schools. They may also be responsible for conducting searches and seizures, issuing citations, and arresting students.

School police departments may have different levels of authority and jurisdiction, depending on the specific agreement with the school district. For example, school police officers may have the authority to issue citations or make arrests for violations that occur on school campuses, or they may be limited to issuing warnings or referrals to the school district for further action.

Over the past decade, school police departments have become a common presence on school campuses in California. Some school police have a broadly defined mission, such as law enforcement and security, while others focus more narrowly on school safety. In California, school police departments are often part of local law enforcement agencies, such as county or municipal police departments. These agencies may have a formal agreement with the local school district to provide police services on school campuses, or they may provide services on a more informal basis. In some cases, school police officers may be sworn law enforcement officers, while in other cases, they may be civilians, such as school security officers or school resource officers.

In California, school police departments may be responsible for a variety of tasks, including maintaining order, responding to incidents, and providing assistance to schools. They may also be responsible for conducting searches and seizures, issuing citations, and arresting students.

School police departments may have different levels of authority and jurisdiction, depending on the specific agreement with the school district. For example, school police officers may have the authority to issue citations or make arrests for violations that occur on school campuses, or they may be limited to issuing warnings or referrals to the school district for further action.

Over the past decade, school police departments have become a common presence on school campuses in California. Some school police have a broadly defined mission, such as law enforcement and security, while others focus more narrowly on school safety. In California, school police departments are often part of local law enforcement agencies, such as county or municipal police departments. These agencies may have a formal agreement with the local school district to provide police services on school campuses, or they may provide services on a more informal basis. In some cases, school police officers may be sworn law enforcement officers, while in other cases, they may be civilians, such as school security officers or school resource officers.

In California, school police departments may be responsible for a variety of tasks, including maintaining order, responding to incidents, and providing assistance to schools. They may also be responsible for conducting searches and seizures, issuing citations, and arresting students.

School police departments may have different levels of authority and jurisdiction, depending on the specific agreement with the school district. For example, school police officers may have the authority to issue citations or make arrests for violations that occur on school campuses, or they may be limited to issuing warnings or referrals to the school district for further action.
WE RESPECT NM WOMEN
The ACLU of New Mexico Launches a Bold New Vision for Changing the Conversation about Abortion

We’re lucky in New Mexico. Our beautiful state is one of the few remaining places in the country where a woman can make deeply personal decisions about abortion without government interference. New Mexicans understand that a woman and her family need access to a full range of reproductive healthcare, including abortion. While other states have enacted more than 300 laws that restrict access to abortion in the past 5 years alone, New Mexico remains a place where women from our communities and across the country can access the safe and legal healthcare our families need.

This respect for women has made New Mexico a target for anti-abortion groups, however. Operation Rescue, one of the most extreme anti-abortion groups in the country with a history of violence against abortion providers, has set up shop in New Mexico. In 2013, anti-abortion groups attempted to pass an abortion ban by ballot measure in Albuquerque, a feat that had never before been attempted at the municipal level. Every year during the legislative session, anti-abortion legislators introduce a slew of bills to try and make it harder to access abortion. Continued on page 2

LEGISLATIVE CHALLENGES
A Review of the 2016 Legislative Session

The 2016 Legislative session was one of the toughest in recent memory, but the ACLU of New Mexico was there every day protecting civil liberties, defending access to reproductive healthcare, and pushing back against lawmakers’ attempts to try and incarcerate their way out of societal problems. Here are some of the highlights from this year’s session:

MASS INCARCERATION
In 2015, New Mexico was shaken by several high-profile crimes, and many lawmakers reacted by promising to increase criminal penalties and throw even more people into our already overburdened corrections system. We know that this approach hasn’t worked in the past, and does nothing to make us safer or address the root societal causes of crime. The rest of the country is beginning to recognize this, and is moving away from these damaging and unjust policies.

Here in New Mexico, however, legislators introduced more than two dozen bills that would do nothing more than erode civil liberties and contribute to the over-incarceration of communities of color. There was even a “three strikes” bill, which would have added 12 new felony crimes to the books. What happens when someone gets convicted of three felonies? An automatic life sentence. You’re out!

Despite this onslaught of bad legislation, we managed to stop many of the bills in committee and improve the ones that made it to the governor’s desk. In addition to blocking regressive crime bills, we worked on several bills that would increase protection of civil liberties and find solutions for our broken criminal justice system. Continued on page 4
A newsletter should be packed with information — but it shouldn’t feel overwhelming.

Do the colors show who we are? p. 90
Black is best for long texts. Reserve the ACLU palette for sidebars and images.

Do the images tell engaging stories? p. 128
The bottom image was a little bland and needed the modern engraving treatment.

Is the typography clear and confident? p. 102
The name of this newsletter is displayed confidently in GT America, as are article titles. The body of the articles are assured and easy to read in Century Schoolbook.

Is the layout dynamic and multilayered? p. 148
A column structure keeps things organized and provides space for a little breathing room.

Is our voice purposeful and consistent? p. 124
The headlines are affirmative but not braggy.

Are we properly identified? p. 68
The affiliate logo is clearly displayed. But there’s no special logo for The Torch, as that would detract from the ACLU brand itself. See p. 83 for more on our brand architecture.
It is our duty, as the people of this country, to ensure that constitutional rights and liberties are guaranteed to all of us.

TAKE ACTION WITH THE ACLU

WE THE PEOPLE
DARE TO CREATE A MORE PERFECT UNION
This is a magazine ad meant to attract new members. It has to be enticing and bold.

Do the colors show who we are? p. 90
The text is huge, so it’s ok to keep the colors calm. ACLU blue is always eye-catching. ACLU light azure is close enough so it doesn’t distract, but it has more interest than white.

Do the images tell engaging stories? p. 128
No image needed. The headline commands plenty of attention.

Is the typography clear and confident? p. 102
The headline is a bold declaration, so it’s in all caps GT America. So are the calls to action. The longer explanatory text is in sentence case and in Century Schoolbook.

Is the layout dynamic and multilayered? p. 148
The asymmetry and large contrast in size make this unconventional yet sophisticated.

Is our voice purposeful and consistent? p. 124
Our “quest” is the perfect choice.

Are we properly identified? p. 68
The red logo stands out clearly against the background.
THE MOTTO OF THE MILWAUKEE POLICE IS BE A FORCE. THE QUESTION IS, FOR WHAT?

Jarrett English, Youth Organizer of the ACLU of Wisconsin, believes that the Milwaukee neighborhood of Sherman Park was once “the epitome of a stable, largely Black neighborhood. Now it has been turned into something resembling a police state.”

It’s okay to reserve ACLU red and ACLU blue for small parts of your layout, as long as they appear somewhere. See p. 92 for more on this.
WE THE PEOPLE
DARE TO CREATE A MORE PERFECT UNION

It is our duty, as the people of this country, to ensure that constitutional rights and liberties are guaranteed to all of us.

JOIN THE ACLU

SEPARATE IS NEVER EQUAL

READ THE CASE
G.G. v. Gloucester County School Board

FACT:
In 2014, The United States spent $1.84 billion detaining immigrants.
WE THE PEOPLE DARE TO CREATE A MORE PERFECT UNION

ACLU
Posters need to communicate our message and our brand clearly and from a distance.

Do the colors show who we are? p. 90
ACLU light yellow is energizing, and together with ACLU red and ACLU blue, it’s patriotic but unexpected.

Do the images tell engaging stories? p. 128
This image is mostly for atmosphere. It adds texture without distraction.

Is the typography clear and confident? p. 102
This bold declaration is set in GT America.

Is the layout dynamic and multilayered? p. 148
The asymmetrical type, layered on a subtle modern engraving texture, makes for a poster that’s both straightforward and nuanced.

Is our voice purposeful and consistent? p. 124
This is our tagline — completed by an inspiring statement.

Are we properly identified? p. 68
This is the national logo. The red version stands out clearly against the background.
In a crowded protest, the boldest and bluntest signs stand out. Think about the signs from the Civil Rights Movement (p. 14). Keep images simple or don’t use any at all.
protest signs

WE THE PEOPLE
ACLU

BLACK LIVES MATTER
ACLU

I ❤️ REPRO RIGHTS
ACLU

PRISON REFORM NOW
ACLU
We fight for your rights in courts, legislatures, and communities throughout the country.

Jane Roe
123 Mulberry Street
Town ST 12345

ACLU Membership Renewal Notice

Ms. Roe, we count on you when our civil liberties are in jeopardy. Help keep the ACLU at full strength by renewing your membership through November 2017.

The ACLU fights hard to defend the principles embedded in the Constitution because, when those principles are violated, people — often the most vulnerable among us — pay a terrible price. At a time of serious challenges, you can help the ACLU fight for people’s rights in the courts, in legislatures, and in the court of public opinion.

Thank you for your support.

ACLU

To: ACLU Membership Dept.
125 Broad St, 18th fl.
New York NY 10004

Fr: Jane Roe
123 Mulberry Street
Town, ST 12345

☐ Yes! As I have at other key moments, I am stepping forward to lead the fight to protect our civil liberties by activating my ACLU Membership. Enclosed is my contribution of:

☐ $30

☐ Other $ _________

To make your gift by credit card, please complete the form on the reverse. Please make checks payable to the ACLU and mail, along with this form, in the envelope provided. Contributions to the ACLU are not tax deductible.
Thank you for your ongoing support to the ACLU. Please renew your membership during this crucial time by filling the form below.

DONATION

Monthly Contribution Level

☐ $15  ☐ $20  ☐ $35

☐ $65  ☐ $100  ☐ Other __________

YOUR INFORMATION

First Name

Last Name

CREDIT CARD BILLING INFORMATION

Address

Address Line 2

City

State  Zip Code

EXPIRATION DATE  CARD SECURITY CODE

ADDITIONAL DONOR NAME  (OPTIONAL)

First Name

Last Name

☐ Fight for Freedom

Get updates on the Fight for Freedom. An informed membership is freedom’s best defense. Sign up for ACLU emails to keep informed and know when to act.

☐ May we share your info?

Yes, you may share my name and mailing address with other charities. (Allowing the ACLU to exchange your name helps us to grow our membership and better protect civil liberties.) Click here to find out more.

Contributions to the American Civil Liberties Union are not tax deductible. Questions? Call (212) 549-2543
Merchandise

enamel pins

keychain
apparel
embroidered patches

[Images of embroidered patches with ACLU logos] card case tote bag

bumper stickers
DETAILS

How to make things
This section of the handbook is full of information and instructions about how best to use specific elements of the ACLU visual identity: our logo, color palette, typefaces, pictures, tone of voice, and so on.

In each subsection, you’ll first see some basic rules. Please follow them! A visual identity like ours has many opportunities for free expression, so it’s essential to make sure we’re all playing by the same rules.

Some ACLU communications (like fact sheets and reports) are very straightforward. Some (like social media graphics and videos) can be more fun. But everything can be made better by getting the details right.
How to make sure we are properly identified
• We are known as the ACLU.

The national ACLU logo is our abbreviation. Not everyone knows our full name, but that’s okay. “ACLU” is a household name. We embrace it.

National logos

!National Logos

Affiliate logos

!Affiliate Logos
• Don’t create other logos.

Every day, we see hundreds of logos for different products and organizations. The world is very cluttered. If we created a custom logo for every initiative and campaign, it would dilute the brand identity of the ACLU.

To rise above the noise and stand out, we rely on our official logos. Campaigns and initiatives should not have their own logos. See p. 83 for more on our official brand architecture and p. 158 for more on how campaigns don’t need custom logos to be effective.
National Logos

• We have a blue logo and a red logo. Both represent the ACLU equally well. Choose the one that you think looks best in your layout. The only rule is that you should use each one about half the time. We want to rise above the politics of color.

National logo — blue version

National logo — red version

The national logo is very simple, so it can be any size you want.
• Use the secondary logo and foundation logo only when legally required.

These versions, with the full name, are less direct (and less impactful). Use them only when it’s mandatory for legal reasons. Because of the small text, don’t make them smaller than 1 inch wide.

Secondary logo

!Secondary logo

Foundation logo

!Foundation logo

min. 1 inch

• On busy or very dark backgrounds, use the white logo.

Legibility comes first.
• Don’t modify the logo.
For consistency, do not change the colors, make the logo translucent, or add special effects. Don’t stretch or distort it. And don’t make your own version of the logo.

Wrong color
Translucent
With special effects
Distorted
Distorted
Extra element added
Diy version
Diy version

Note: If for legibility you need to put the logo in a box, there is an official version. See p. 89.

• Don’t crowd the logo.
If elements get too close, they may look like they are part of the logo. And never block the logo.
• Don’t use the logo in running text. The logo should feel special, more than just a word in a paragraph. Simply write out ACLU when mentioning the organization in text.

Don’t insert the ACLU logo in running text. Simply write out ACLU.

• For black-and-white printing, use the provided black logo or white logo. When printing in black and white, these show up more clearly than the red and blue logos (which print as gray). But don’t use the black logo unless you are printing in black and white! It looks too harsh in a color setting. See p. 88 for black and white logos.
Affiliate Logos

• Every ACLU affiliate has its own logo. Each affiliate logo follows a formula. See p. 88 to download your logo. Full names still include the “of” (“ACLU of Affiliate Name”), but our logos are simpler.

Affiliate Logos

Examples:

Affiliate Name

• On busy or very dark backgrounds, use the white logo. Legibility comes first.
• Don’t modify the logo.
  For consistency, do not change the colors, make the logo translucent, or add special effects. Don’t stretch or distort it. And don’t make your own version of the logo.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>wrong color</th>
<th>wrong color</th>
<th>low opacity</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td><img src="image1" alt="ACLU Logo" /></td>
<td><img src="image2" alt="ACLU Logo" /></td>
<td><img src="image3" alt="ACLU Logo" /></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>drop shadow</td>
<td>in a sticker</td>
<td>reordered elements</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td><img src="image4" alt="ACLU Logo" /></td>
<td><img src="image5" alt="ACLU Logo" /></td>
<td><img src="image6" alt="ACLU Logo" /></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>diy version</td>
<td>type size</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

• Don’t crowd the logo.
  If elements get too close, they may look like they are part of the logo. And never block the logo.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>ACLU Logo</th>
<th>ACLU Logo</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td><img src="image7" alt="ACLU Logo" /></td>
<td><img src="image8" alt="ACLU Logo" /></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td><img src="image9" alt="ACLU Logo" /></td>
<td><img src="image10" alt="ACLU Logo" /></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
• For black-and-white printing, use the provided black logo or white logo. When printing in black and white, these show up more clearly than the red and blue logos (which print as gray). But don’t use the black logo unless you are printing in black and white! It looks too harsh in a color setting. See p. 88 for black and white logos.
• Other versions are for specific use cases. Sometimes the situation or available space makes it difficult to use your primary affiliate logo. Other versions are provided for these specific uses. (But you should use your primary affiliate logo almost all of the time.)

One-line logo
For use on web banners and other short, wide spaces

!ACLU Affiliate Name

Abbreviated logo
For use at very small sizes (mobile website, etc.)

!Abbreviated Logo

Social media icon
For social media profile images and posts

!Social Media Icon
Secondary logo
Only when legally required

Foundation logo
Only when legally required
• Volunteer chapters use their parent logo. For institutional coherence, individual chapters should use their parent affiliate’s logo for all communications. If a chapter needs a logo for legal reasons, use the provided template to make one.

There's a template to make these that includes the correct type sizes and spacing. If you need to create one, please use the template!
Logos on Stationery

Stationery templates are provided. See p. 88 for more on where to download them.
Brand Architecture

An effective visual identity requires that we use a consistent family of logos. The hierarchical relationship between these logos is what we call brand architecture.

Master brand
National logos
Affiliate logos

Sub-brands
Long-term, distinct initiatives that add equity to the ACLU master brand

Endorsed brands
For special projects that occasionally need to be separated from the ACLU
• Our national and affiliate logos are the center of our brand architecture.
These logos (and their variations, as shown on the preceding pages) are the core of our brand architecture. They are what we call our master brand. Almost everything we do should feature these logos.

• Sub-brands are rare.
Sub-brands are for long-term ACLU initiatives that are distinct from our core work. Sub-brands add value to the ACLU’s brand recognition, so their association with the ACLU should be clear and standardized.

  Having too many logos can be confusing. We have at most two or three sub-brands across the entire country at any given time.

Sub-brands all look like this. A consistent format adds equity to the ACLU. Straying from this format — or having too many sub-brands — would be confusing.
• Endorsed brands are also rare.
Endorsed brands are for special projects that sometimes need to take on a life of their own, separated from the ACLU. For example, in some regions, ACLU Smart Justice is known simply as Smart Justice.

Like sub-brands, endorsed brands are rare. We should use the ACLU name and logo as much and as proudly as possible. We limit ourselves to at most two or three endorsed brands total.

Endorsed brands all follow this format. It is designed to work with and without the ACLU logo.

Use this version only when political considerations make it absolutely necessary. The ACLU should get credit for our work.
- Never create a sub-brand or endorsed brand, and never design your own logo.

Almost every piece of communication we make should have one of our main national or affiliate logos. This builds equity for our master brand.

Standard initiatives, departments, and communications campaigns do not require their own logos. See p. 158 for more on how special projects don’t need custom logos to be effective.

If you think one of your initiatives should be a sub-brand or endorsed brand, contact the national communications department. If necessary, they will provide official logos that comply with our brand architecture.
Using logos on social media

Many social media sites automatically convert your profile picture into a circle. Our official social media icons are designed so they will still look good when cropped by one of these sites:

Use your provided official social media icon or the national social media icon.

For legibility and organizational unity, don’t modify the color or layout.

On special occasions, use the temporary icons provided by ACLU National. But switch back to your official social media icon as soon as the occasion passes.
Resources

All of the national logo files are available for download at www.aclu.org/NationalLogos.

Stationery is available at www.aclu.org/NationalStationery.

National logo
blue, red, white, black

Secondary national logo
blue, red, white, black

Foundation national logo
blue, red, white, black

National social media icon
National logo in a box blue on white, red on white, blue on red, red on blue

National stationery
letterhead, envelope, label, business card

The following files are available for each affiliate at www.aclu.org/AffiliateLogos:

Primary affiliate logo
standard, white, black

One-line affiliate logo
standard, white, black

Abbreviated affiliate logo standard, white, black, standard box, black box

Secondary affiliate logo
standard, white, black

Foundation affiliate logo
standard, white, black

Affiliate social media icon

Chapter affiliate logo templates
FAQs

My background is really busy, and the blue, red, and white ones just aren’t showing up clearly. Can I put the logo in a box?
There is an official way to put the logo in a box. See the opposite page to download these official versions.

There are no box versions of the standard affiliate logos. Use your abbreviated logo or social media icon (which do have boxes built-in) or consider using the national ACLU logo instead.

What about black-and-white printing?
We also have a black version and a white version of all logos. When printing in black and white, these show up more clearly than the red and blue logos (which print as gray).

How do I choose between the red and blue national logos?
The red and the blue logos are of equal importance in our visual identity system. The choice of which to use, and when, should be driven by design and layout. Often, the choice is determined by which other colors are used in your layout. If you are missing blue, use the blue logo. If you’re missing red, use the red one.
How to use our palette to show who we are
• This is the ACLU color palette.*
Red and blue are the ACLU’s principal colors. Our palette also includes a range of light and dark secondary colors. When we say “red, everything, and blue,” we mean that we have a broad palette. Stick to the colors shown here. You can make almost any mood out of them.

light colors

- white
- ACLU light pink
- ACLU light yellow
- ACLU light orange
- ACLU light azure
- ACLU light green

principal colors

- ACLU blue
- ACLU red

dark colors

- black
- ACLU dark gray
- ACLU dark green
- ACLU dark navy
- ACLU dark burgundy
- ACLU dark purple

* See p. 99 for precise RGB, CMYK, and Pantone values.
• Use red, something else, and blue.

“Red, everything, and blue” is a core idea behind our identity. (Read more about this on p. 16.) In practice, this means that we always use red, blue, and at least one other color from our palette in every design. Start each piece with red and blue — and then include one or two other colors from the ACLU palette to add variety.

Using just blue (or just red) is monotonous and may come off as partisan.

Using too many colors can feel hectic and juvenile.

Using red, blue, and one or two other colors is just the right balance.

And your secondary color can be very prominent. Just make sure there’s a little red and a little blue somewhere.
• Red and blue are in everything we do.
  Our visual identity is built on multiplicity, not monotony. Because every piece includes red and blue, these two will be the most frequently used colors overall — but try all of the other colors at some point in your communications. Don’t get stuck in a color rut by using the same colors for every piece!
• For legibility, combine colors from different parts of the palette. Combining two light colors or two dark colors can make an image or text illegible.

- dark background + dark text
- light background + light text

!SAMPLE

- Use the pure colors. Don’t create tints. If you need a light color, choose one from the palette. Taking a paler tint from one of the pure colors will look washed out and dull.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>ACLU red</th>
<th>tints of red</th>
<th>ACLU light pink</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td><img src="image2" alt="ACLU red" /></td>
<td><img src="image3" alt="tints of red" /></td>
<td><img src="image4" alt="ACLU light pink" /></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>ACLU blue</th>
<th>tints of blue</th>
<th>ACLU light azure</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td><img src="image5" alt="ACLU blue" /></td>
<td><img src="image6" alt="tints of blue" /></td>
<td><img src="image7" alt="ACLU light azure" /></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>ACLU light orange</th>
<th>tints of light orange</th>
<th>ACLU light yellow</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td><img src="image8" alt="ACLU light orange" /></td>
<td><img src="image9" alt="tints of light orange" /></td>
<td><img src="image10" alt="ACLU light yellow" /></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>ACLU dark green</th>
<th>tints of dark green</th>
<th>ACLU light green</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td><img src="image11" alt="ACLU dark green" /></td>
<td><img src="image12" alt="tints of dark green" /></td>
<td><img src="image13" alt="ACLU light green" /></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
• Dark colors look more serious.

Dark colors automatically feel grave, sophisticated, and weighty. The dark part of the palette is a good place to start if you have a serious message to convey. Here are just a few of the many combinations you might use.

But no need to be so obvious all the time! Occasionally you may want to use light colors to bring a little energy or hopefulness to a serious message.
• Light colors are energetic.
  Colors in the light part of the palette are a good place to start when you want a celebratory, active, or positive tone. Here are just a few possible combinations (many others exist).

  But again, no need to be rigid with your color selection. Celebratory messages feel more distinguished and permanent when rendered in dark colors.
• For text-heavy pieces, don’t go heavy on color. Large fields of color look best on social media and videos. For very text-heavy printed communications such as letters, reports, and brochures, use a light touch with the color. Black text on a white background is the most legible and least distracting. Confine colors to small accents, like titles and sidebars.

California school districts maintain a variety of relationships and arrangements with local law enforcement that fall into three general categories with their own police departments to assign officers to campuses, and districts that call outside police to campus on an as-needed basis.

First, some school districts hire and oversee their own law enforcement offices, who are employees of the school district. These offices typically are stationed on school campuses (or attached areas). They possess the general powers of other sworn law enforcement officers in California, including the power to question, detain, and arrest.

Second, some school districts enter into agreements or MOUs with county or municipal police departments to station law enforcement officers on or around school campuses. These police officers are also commonly known as School Resource Officers (SROs) or School Safety Officers. For example, the Fresno Police Department assigns a number of police officers to the school district on a permanent or rotating basis. In San Jose, the school district uses a hybrid approach: the police chief is a school district employee who coordinates the activities of permanent site-based officers who are employees of the municipal police department.

Third, many school districts do not maintain a permanent police presence in their schools but instead call local police officers to campus on an as-needed basis. A small number of these school districts enter into agreements or MOUs with the local law enforcement agency to govern interactions between school staff, students, and law enforcement officers.

Table A

Number of Full-Time Sworn Officers Assigned to Police Departments (2015-2016)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>District</th>
<th>Full-Time Officers</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Los Angeles PD</td>
<td>278</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>San Diego City Schools PD</td>
<td>12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Beacons PD</td>
<td>28</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Santa Ana USD PD</td>
<td>26</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>San Bernardino USD PD</td>
<td>28</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Compton USD PD</td>
<td>25</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Los Angeles High School District</td>
<td>20</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LAUSD PD</td>
<td>22</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pomona USD PD</td>
<td>16</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Delano USD PD</td>
<td>17</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chino USD PD</td>
<td>12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Baldwin Park HS PD</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Inglewood USD PD</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Baldwin Park HS PD</td>
<td>9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Barstow USD PD</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Garfield USD PD</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Apple Valley USD PD</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>El Rancho USD PD</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sierra Verde USD PD</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

In addition to or in place of law enforcement officers, some school districts use school security officers (upon security granted by the school district relative to law enforcement, school regulations, and school safety). In some schools, these officers may be referred to as school security officers or school safety officers, school resource officers, or some other title. According to the ACLU-CA, school districts with the most arrests for 2015-2016 were excluded from this list of districts with the most arrests.

This trend is particularly disturbing given that the ratio of students per counselor in California is 940:1, the highest in the nation and almost double the national average. This means that in California, school counselors are expected to handle the highest numbers of students in the country, and students have severely restricted access to counselor time compared to other states.

---

3 The Right to Remain a Student

ACLU-CA Calculations of CRDC 2013-2014 Data, on file with the ACLU-CA. For the ten California school districts reporting the most arrests for 2015-2016 (the most recent year with available statewide statistics) were districts with their own police departments: Los Angeles Unified, San Bernardino City Unified, San Diego Unified, Hacienda La Puente Unified, Chula Unified, Fontana Unified, and Santa Ana Unified.

2 The Right to Remain a Student ACLU California

16 AMENDMENT Rights to Remain a Student

1 Based on ACLU-CA calculations of CRDC 2013-2014 data, on file with the ACLU-CA. 2 The Right to Remain a Student ACLU California

• When print budgets are limited, limit your palette.
  Full-color printing is expensive. You can instead use one or two Pantone (PMS) colors to save money. (More on these on p. 101.) With these printing limitations, it’s okay if your piece doesn’t follow all of our color rules for tints and using “red, something else, and blue.”

  Black-and-white printing is also perfectly fine. When, and only when, you need a black logo for black-and-white printing, see pages 74 and 77.
Tech Specs

ACLU red
RGB 239, 64, 78 (#ef404d)
CMYK 0, 90, 67, 00
PMS Red 032 C / Red 032 U

ACLU blue
RGB 0, 85, 170 (#0055aa)
CMYK 100, 70, 0, 0
PMS 2175 C / 2175 U

ACLU light pink
RGB 250, 190, 175 (#fabeaf)
CMYK 0, 30, 25, 0
PMS 169 C / 169 U

ACLU light yellow
RGB 255, 224, 106 (#ffdf69)
CMYK 0, 10, 70, 0
PMS 107 C / 107 U

ACLU light orange
RGB 252, 170, 23 (#fbb416)
CMYK 0, 35, 100, 0
PMS 1235 C / 1235 U

ACLU light azure
RGB 146, 214, 227 (#92d6e3)
CMYK 40, 0, 10, 0
PMS 304 C / 304 U

ACLU light green
RGB 142, 207, 174 (#8dcead)
CMYK 45, 0, 40, 0
PMS 7478 C / 7478 U

black
RGB 0, 0, 0 (#000000)
CMYK 0, 0, 0, 100
PMS Black C / Black U

ACLU dark gray
RGB 71, 64, 61 (#463f3d)
CMYK 50, 50, 50, 60
PMS Warm Gray 11 C / Warm Gray 11 U

ACLU dark green
RGB 0, 52, 58 (#00343a)
CMYK 100, 60, 60, 55
PMS 7718 C / 7718 U

ACLU dark navy
RGB 35, 30, 96 (#231e5f)
CMYK 100, 100, 20, 30
PMS Blue 072 C / Blue 072 U

ACLU dark burgundy
RGB 105, 27, 64 (#681b40)
CMYK 55, 100, 60, 30
PMS 2041 C / 2041 U

ACLU dark purple
RGB 94, 32, 108 (#5e1f6c)
CMYK 70, 100, 15, 20
PMS 527 C / 527 U
The following resources are available for download.

for Microsoft Office
The color palette comes pre-loaded with all templates, and is available for download separately at www.aclu.org/MSOfficeColorPalette.

for Adobe Creative Suite
Color palette files (.ase) for web (RGB), standard 4-color printing (CMYK), and Pantone printing (PMS) are available for download at www.aclu.org/AdobeColorPalette. The palettes also come preloaded with all templates.

The following site can help you evaluate whether your graphics are clear to people with visual impairment: color-blindness.com/coblis-color-blindness-simulator/

The ACLU also consults the Center for Accessible Technology as a resource to ensure accessibility.
FAQs

What is the difference between RGB, CMYK, and PMS colors?
These are different color systems for different production methods.

RGB
This is for screen display (e.g., web graphics, videos). RGB stands for red, green, and blue. You can use either the individual red, green, and blue values (e.g., 239, 64, and 78, respectively) or the hex code, a special code used by websites that corresponds directly to the same exact color (e.g., #ef404d). These are just two ways of saying the same exact thing. Use whichever one is easier to input in your software.

CMYK
This is for standard printing. CMYK stands for cyan, magenta, yellow, and black. The numerical values given are for percentages of cyan, magenta, yellow, and black that make up the color.

PMS
This is for professional (offset) printing. PMS stands for Pantone Matching System. Each PMS number corresponds with a standardized pre-mixed ink. Using pre-mixed inks ensures that colors print accurately, but it’s most cost-effective when you have three or fewer colors in your document (e.g., a simple poster, a bumper sticker). These are also the colors you should typically use for screenprinting. Numbers with a C (for “coated”) are for printing on paper that has a coating, like glossy paper. Numbers with a U (for “uncoated”) are for printing on papers that do not have a coating.
TYPOGRAPHY

How to use our typefaces to be clear and confident
GT America

• GT America is for our “activist” voice. When you want to take a firm stand, use GT America. Use it for expressive, declarative, and opinion-driven statements.

GT America extended thin and extended bold

FREE SPEECH IS A RIGHT

• Choose any style you like. GT America is a font family with a broad range of thicknesses (from thin to bold) and widths (from compressed to extended).

  How loudly do you want to speak? Thinner styles speak in a softer voice, while bold ones are louder.

  Different widths don’t really correspond with different decibel levels, but they’re helpful for creating variety — and for fitting your text in the space available.
• Mix styles for emphasis.
  Change select words to a different width or a different thickness for emphasis. It lets some words stand out while preserving the wholeness of the statement. (To avoid over-complication, try to vary either thickness or width, but not both.)

DISSENT

IS

PATRIOTIC

---

WE

KNOW

OUR

RIGHTS

---

GT America compressed bold

GT America extended bold:
Keeping the same thickness (bold) but changing to a wider style (extended instead of compressed) adds emphasis.

GT America extended bold:
Keeping the same width (extended) but changing to a thicker style (bold instead of regular) is another way to add emphasis.
Emphasis is carefully placed to stress an equivalence.

GT America compressed thin

GT America extended thin:
Powerful words don’t really need any extra emphasis. And type doesn’t have to be loud (bold) to be strong.

GT America compressed bold

These two styles are different in thickness and width. They’re too different and make the statement look disjointed.

To figure out which words should be emphasized, try reading your declaration out loud. Which words do you naturally say louder?
WOMEN’S RIGHTS ARE CIVIL RIGHTS

Be careful! Different type can imply that words are unequal.

- GT America condensed bold
- GT America extended bold

• Say it loud: Use ALL CAPS. When using GT America to make a bold declaration, use all caps. This will often be the case for social media, ads, and posters.

THIS IS A BOLD STATEMENT

But for statements longer than 15 words, use normal sentence case or change to Century.

IT’S ONE THING TO USHER A RALLYING CRY, BUT IT’S ANOTHER THING TO SHOUT AN ENTIRE SPEECH AT THE TOP OF YOUR LUNGS. DON’T USE ALL CAPS FOR STATEMENTS LONGER THAN 15 WORDS.

Also, avoid hyphens in big text!
Century Schoolbook

• Century is for our “informational” voice. When you need to convey facts, legal analysis, or explanations, use Century Schoolbook. Use it for body text and for headlines or titles with an institutional or informational tone.

Findings and Conclusion

Civil Asset Forfeiture

• Use sentence case or title case. Century Schoolbook isn’t for shouting. Only the first letter of a sentence and proper nouns need to be capitalized. For titles, follow capitalization rules for headlines in Associated Press (AP) style.
• Use italics selectively.

Italics are an elegant and time-honored way of adding interest when using serif typefaces. (Bold didn’t come into wide use until the mid-19th century, and it can look clunky.) For formal titles, such as those on report covers, consider italicizing short words; it lends an extra air of formality.

But don’t overdo it. Italics are like salt: A little goes a long way.

This is the Constitution of the United States of America.

Italicizing only short words is a particular design flourish that should only be used on designed pieces like covers of reports and pocket constitutions. Stick to traditional AP and Blue Book rules for italicizing text in legal documents, letters, and articles.

If you try to make everything look special, nothing looks special.
Type in General

• Keep color and size uniform. Avoid fussiness. Whether working in print or digital, use only one font size (e.g., 14 pt.) and color per headline or per paragraph.

• Don’t center or justify text. A left alignment is easy to read, and asymmetry always feels contemporary. Centering or justifying text can easily look too conventional.
• Try not to mix GT America and Century in a single headline.
These two type families speak in two different voices. Avoid combining them in the same headline.

• Choose colors for maximum contrast.
If you have a dark background, use a light color for the text, and vice versa. Avoid putting text on top of high-contrast images or patterns. (See p. 90–101 and 157 for more on color.)

• Use GT America for very small text.
Although typically GT America is used for our activist voice, it’s also handy for very small text, such as captions, chart labels, and photo credits because of its legibility. Use GT America for any text that is 8 pt. or smaller. (And 8 pt. is a good size for captions.)

Figure 1: Graph showing U.S. incarceration rates

PHOTO: Shutterstock

Details: Typography 111
Text Boxes

You’ve probably noticed lots of text in boxes. These text boxes are a great way to add another layer of information to your design: Try adding a “victory” banner to a social post, a hashtag to a digital ad, or a pull quote to a fact sheet. Text boxes also help with legibility when you have a busy background. And they add depth and variety to any composition.

• Text boxes are for short copy. They’re for add-ons and quick reads. More than 25 words is too many.

BREAKING NEWS

Research reveals that employees with criminal backgrounds are a better pool for employers.

VICTORY

• Keep it simple: one idea per text box. Don’t try to squeeze in too much! Stick to a single point, and don’t add an image.

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

You have the right to remain silent.

DISSENT IS PATRIOTIC

112 Details: Typography
• And one text box per idea.
It’s too disruptive to split up a single headline or phrase into multiple boxes. Stick to one idea per text box — and one text box per idea.

• Keep corners square.

• Make the margins even.
Always leave some space between the edge of the box and the text inside it, and make sure it’s even on all sides.
• Use only one or two at a time.
  Don’t overdo it. Your composition will look cluttered or hectic if you use more than two in one poster or post, or on a single page of a multipage document.

• Angles are your friend.
  On social posts and posters where the tone is less formal, you can think of text boxes like stickers: When you slap it on the page, it probably won’t be perfectly level. And that’s exactly how we want it.

  Just right:
  It should look like you placed it on by hand. No need to be precise, but if you want a rule, try for something between 2° and 8°.

  Too little:
  seems so close to straight that it could just be a mistake

  Too much:
  looks too wacky when it’s tilted too far
• Boxes love layers.
Text boxes, like sticky notes, work well when layered on other elements. Place them on non-essential areas of an image or at the very edge of a text so it’s still readable. (See also p. 155 for more on layering boxes)

• Don’t make text boxes transparent.
Transparency is bad for legibility — and the sharp look we want. Colors look best at full opacity.

• Give the logo some space.
Text boxes that are too close to the logo can look like they’re part of it. Give the logo some space and make sure it is always on the top layer.
• Sidebars are special cases.

Sidebars in reports and newsletters are a special type of box. Unlike a typical text box, they don’t have a word limit and shouldn’t be angled.

---

Law Enforcement Act, which eliminated federal funding for incarcerated individuals seeking to take college courses. While Pell Grants awarded to those individuals made up just one-tenth of a percentage point in the overall program’s budget, the impact of this exclusion was dramatic. Where there were once more than 350 degree-granting programs in the nation’s prisons, there were only eight in 2005. In response to advocacy by coalitions like Education from the Inside Out, the Obama administration’s Second Chance Pell Pilot Program, which was rolled out in 2016, extends Pell Grants to 12,000 students in 184 penal institutions. Sixty-seven colleges and universities were selected to provide educational services—from vocational certifications, associates and bachelor degrees—at federal and state prisons under this program, and of those, more than 10 percent are colleges that traditionally serve students of color. The program provides $30 million in Pell grants to incarcerated students in 27 states.

With research clearly showing that in-prison education can help reduce recidivism and increase employability after release, this pilot program should be expanded. And if employment is the goal for the hundreds of thousands leaving prisons every year, then “we need to be asking how does the educational experience contribute to doing more than providing subsistence,” says Dr. Michael Lomax, President of the United Negro College Fund.

---

CASE STUDY

WILEY COLLEGE

Selected by the Obama administration along with 66 other colleges and universities for the Second Chance Pell Pilot Program, Wiley College in Texas, a historically black college, is creating associate and bachelor degree programs in prisons, taught by college professors and teaching aides, beginning in Spring 2017. Wiley will work in three Louisiana penitentiaries, including one women’s facility. Students will get the chance to pick from several majors, including criminal justice and sociology. The program provides $30 million in Pell grants to incarcerated students in 27 states.

With research clearly showing that in-prison education can help reduce recidivism and increase employability after release, this pilot program should be expanded. And if employment is the goal for the hundreds of thousands leaving prisons every year, then “we need to be asking how does the educational experience contribute to doing more than providing subsistence,” says Dr. Michael Lomax, President of the United Negro College Fund.

WILEY COLLEGE

Selected by the Obama administration along with 66 other colleges and universities for the Second Chance Pell Pilot Program, Wiley College in Texas, a historically black college, is creating associate and bachelor degree programs in prisons, taught by college professors and teaching aides, beginning in Spring 2017. Wiley will work in three Louisiana penitentiaries, including one women’s facility. Students will get the chance to pick from several majors, including criminal justice and sociology. Dr. Tracy Andrus, director of Wiley College’s Criminal Justice Department and the college’s prison program, sees this initiative as instrumental to elevating the mission at the center of Historically Black Colleges and Universities: equitable opportunity, social justice, and economic mobility.

The programs are a natural fit for the colleges, says Dr. Andrus, who served time in one of the prisons where Wiley will now operate, before going on to earn a Ph.D. in juvenile justice. He sees this as a chance to expand the college’s efforts to work with nontraditional students. “This program will serve a population that is not unlike many of the students at Wiley already,” he says, noting that students at Wiley often come from the same impoverished communities.

It is critical, he says, to develop spaces for learning in prisons. “Many of these individuals never got a first chance, let alone a second,” Dr. Andrus notes. “This can be a critical means of beginning, at least, to correct the structural inequalities that led to policies of mass incarceration.”

---

It is critical, he says, to develop spaces for learning in prisons. “Many of these individuals never got a first chance, let alone a second,” Dr. Andrus notes. “This can be a critical means of beginning, at least, to correct the structural inequalities that led to policies of mass incarceration.”

---

This is not. It’s a sidebar.
Our Tagline

“We the People” is the beginning of the Constitution, but it also neatly sums up our attitude toward change: It isn’t the work of one person, or one party, or one side. It’s about all of us, coming together to make change happen.

• “We the People” is a great headline. It works well as a declaration on a poster, a protest sign, an ad, or a social post.
• When it’s not the headline, it’s a stamp.
  The format is like a text box, but with an outline instead of a solid background. This way it fits within the system — but also stands out.

• The tagline stamp can be used freely.
  There are many ways to use the tagline because the tagline stamp can be angled and layered just like a standard text box. See p. 112 for more details on using text boxes.
• We the People come first.
  There’s one exception to the rules: Ordinarily nothing comes too close to or stands in front of the ACLU logo, but we make an exception for “We the People.” The tagline stamp is the only thing that can be used over the logo. Place it on the logo as shown below: angled 7° and just touching the U. This feels integrated, but the ACLU logo is still legible.

  !ACLW_We_the_People.png

• It can also be the start of a great headline.
  “We the People” becomes a rallying cry when you complete the sentence. Here are just a few ideas:

  – We the People Dare to Create a More Perfect Union
  – We the People Are Stronger Together
  – We the People Stand Up for Justice
Tech Specs

Please use one of the provided templates (in Word, InDesign, or Photoshop); which have all of these type settings preloaded and saved in easily accessible styles.

GT America

For headlines + declarations

- Case:
  - All caps

- Tracking (character spacing):
  - 0 in InDesign, default in Word

- Word spacing:
  - 80% (min. 60%, max. 100%)

- Leading (line spacing):
  - Same as type size (e.g., if your type is 18 pt., your line spacing should be 18 pt., too)*

For very small text

- Case:
  - Sentence case or title case

- Tracking (character spacing):
  - 0 in InDesign, default in Word

- Word spacing:
  - 80% (min. 60%, max. 100%)

- Leading (line spacing):
  - 125% of the type size (e.g., if your type is 12 pt., your line spacing should be 15 pt.)*

Century

- Case:
  - Sentence case or title case

- Tracking (character spacing):
  - -10 in InDesign, 1 hundredth of the font size in Word (e.g., if your type is 12 pt., condense character spacing by 0.12 pt.); but for very small text/captions, use 0 (default) instead.

- Word spacing:
  - 80% (min. 60%, max. 100%)

- Leading (line spacing):
  - 125% of the type size (e.g., if your type is 12 pt., your line spacing should be 15 pt.)*

Note: Settings for leading are suggestions only. Very large text, such as the headline of a poster, often looks best with tighter leading, as does text set in very narrow columns.
How to adjust tracking (character spacing)
In Word, go to Font > Advanced. Under Character Spacing, click on Spacing and select Condensed; then, enter your desired adjustment in the “by” field.

In InDesign, open the Character palette and enter your value in the box for tracking.

How to adjust word spacing
In Word, there is no way to adjust word spacing.
In InDesign, open the Paragraph palette, open the menu, and select Justification Settings (the Mac shortcut is shift-option-command-J and the Windows shortcut is Alt+Ctrl+Shift+J). In the row for word spacing, enter 60% for the minimum, 80% for desired, and 100% for maximum.

How to adjust leading (line spacing)
In Word, choose Design > Paragraph Spacing > Custom Paragraph Spacing. Then choose Exactly and enter your value.

In InDesign, open the Character palette and enter your value in the box for leading.

Hyphenation
Word processing and design programs can automatically insert hyphens to break long words over multiple lines. Excessive hyphens can be distracting, though. Avoid using hyphens at the end of two successive lines, and never use them in headlines.
Resources

Font packages are already installed on your computers. For help, contact branding@aclu.org.

GT America
The full set of GT America fonts is already installed for communications staff who are responsible for design.

If your core responsibilities do not include design, you need only four styles of GT America (regular, regular italic, bold, and bold italic) for basic Word documents and PowerPoint presentations. These will give you the tools to create basic designs within the brand. They have been installed on your computers.

For help, contact branding@aclu.org.

Century Schoolbook
If you have Microsoft Office, you already have Century Schoolbook. If you’re having trouble, contact branding@aclu.org. (2013 TBC)
Can I put the logo in a box?
There is an official way to put the logo in a box. See p. 88 and 89 to learn more and download the official versions.

To ensure consistency, use the provided files rather than create your own.

There are no box versions of the standard affiliate logos. Use your abbreviated logo or social media icon (which do have boxes built-in), or consider using the national ACLU logo instead.

Can I send these fonts to a freelancer?
The ACLU has enough font licenses to send to the occasional freelancer. Please make it clear that they may use the fonts only for the duration of the project at hand, and they should delete the fonts after it ends.

Are there any fallback fonts if I’m using a computer or software that doesn’t have access to the official fonts?
If you must, you can use these more widely accessible fallback fonts (in order of preference).

in place of Century Schoolbook – Century Expanded
– New Century Schoolbook
– Georgia

in place of GT America
– Franklin Gothic
– Arial

What about other Century fonts, like Century Gothic?
Don’t use Century Gothic. It’s too different. But Century Expanded and New Century Schoolbook are similar to Century Schoolbook and will do in a pinch.

I’m filing a brief with a court that requires a different font. What should I do?
Follow the requirements of the court! While the Supreme Court requires some version of Century, not all courts have the same requirements. The rules of the court come first.
TONE OF VOICE

How to make sure our words are purposeful and consistent
• “We the people dare to create a more perfect union” is our quest.
A quest is a unifying statement that describes who we are, defining our ambition for the world and driving everything we do as an organization.

• “We the people” is our tagline.
It distills our quest into a powerful and memorable statement. It succinctly articulates what we stand for, engages key audiences, and reflects how and why we champion everyone’s rights.

Our Brand Voice

The ACLU brand voice is the purposeful, consistent expression of our personality, which comes across in all external communications, both those created by the ACLU and by any outside partner working on our behalf.

To better understand how to write in the ACLU voice we’ve created 6 guiding principles, each rooted in a different dimension of our personality. For more specifics, make sure to check out our full tone of voice guide.
• We empower action.
  No matter the issue, we don’t just tell you what we’re doing, we give you practical ways to help and to make change.

• We’re in this together.
  We can’t take on every fight alone. Luckily we have allies, and they have us. We’re proud to lift one another up and support any way we can.

• We bring heart.
  We fight for the people behind the issues — the underrepresented and misunderstood whose rights are most often threatened. Therefore, we care deeply and publicly.

• We see the forest for the trees.
  After nearly 100 years, we’ve learned to keep things in perspective. It’s not about winning the point, but the match.

• We teach, not preach.
  We keep people informed with credible, fact-based information that’s never biased or partisan.

• We’re “We the People.”
  Even when discussing complex subjects, we’re accessible — never condescending, boring, or elitist.
Resources

Please see the companion to this handbook, the tone of voice guide, for more on our verbal identity.
How to use images to tell engaging stories
Photographs

• A photo is a way to deliver information. Not all communications will need photos. Sometimes words and strong typography alone can be powerful! If a photo won’t add information, consider omitting it.

• Consider who is represented. The ACLU fights for all people: That should be reflected throughout our communications. Take care to be inclusive.

  Consider your subjects and how they are represented in the media. As a large institution, we are in a position of power. Many of the people we represent are not. Avoid generalizing about any group or tokenizing any person, and ask yourself whether your image inadvertently silences, victimizes, or reinforces assumptions. We must take care in how we depict all people.
• Get permission and give credit.
  If you didn’t take the photo yourself, you need to confirm permission to use it for your intended purpose.

  And always credit the photographer or source: Even if not required by the licensor, we include a credit to give a nod to where we got the image. Our standard credit is in the lower right corner of the image. Follow this simple formula: “photo: credit line” or “footage: credit line.” See p. 146 and 147 for resources and details on proper licensing and crediting.
• Photographs should look real. We like portraits of leaders, candid photos of everyday citizens, and on-the-ground documentation of historic events. This is real life, powered by real people.

Look for photos that feel unposed or at least have a natural setting and lighting (instead of looking like the inside of a photo studio).

These photos are candid and naturally lit.

These are believable documentations of actual events (and their message is clear).
• Photos shouldn’t look fake or synthetic. Avoid photos that look too posed. And don’t use excessive filters or effects. It’s okay to adjust contrast, but don’t get carried away.

These photos are too posed and generic — they look fake.

Too gauzy  Just right  Too harsh

Don’t add fake shadows or spotlights, either. Photos should feel authentic and unvarnished.
• Portraits should feel frank, not formal. Sometimes you need a posed portrait. It’s okay for the person to look straight in the camera. That directness is great! But look for natural expressions, gestures, and backgrounds.

• Show context. Removing backgrounds removes context and feels synthetic. Avoid overcropping or silhouetting.
• Consider your photo’s content.
Sometimes we need to communicate urgency about a difficult, even frightening situation. But our images shouldn’t be gratuitous, and they should represent the truth of the subject matter.

This simulation feels over-dramatized and manipulative. This official Defense Department document is objective.

• Check the resolution.
Sometimes a photo looks great onscreen, but when it’s printed, it looks pixelated and blurry. That’s what we mean when we call something low resolution or “low res.” The pixel density is too low. Look for at least 300 pixels (or dots) per square inch (that is, 300 dpi). That means if you want the photo to appear 10 inches tall when printed, it should measure 3,000 pixels tall; and if you want to print it 1 inch tall, it should be 300 pixels.
The Modern Engraving

The ACLU’s modern engraving treatment is a distinctive way to set ACLU communications apart.

• It’s better for some images than others. The modern engraving is a nice choice most of the time, but it’s particularly well suited for some images — and not so well for others. Follow these guidelines:

The modern engraving is good for
- stock photos or dull images
- low-resolution or poor quality photos
- portraits
- very serious or aggressive topics (when regular photographs feel too graphic)

The modern engraving is bad for
- any photo with a license that doesn’t explicitly allow for modifications (see p. 146)
- historic photos
- fine art (photographs or paintings where authorship is important)
- photos with very poor contrast
It makes generic stock photos look more distinguished.

Lackluster snapshots become much more interesting.

And it makes portraits feel historic.

But don’t mess with historic or fine art images.
• Choose two colors per image. Make sure there is enough contrast so you can see what is in the image. A good rule of thumb is to select colors from different parts of the palette (light, primary, or dark). You can always select from our premade color pairings (see p. 152).

• Make sure the engraving lines are visible. Determine the approximate size that the image will be first. Then, when you apply the modern engraving treatment, the lines will be appropriately sized.

- Lines too fine
- Just right
- Lines too thick
• Consider the people in the photographs. This treatment has many advantages, but it is not for fine detail. Will it obscure someone’s face when you don’t want it to? This is something to consider when showing images of people who are under-represented in the media. A clear, straightforward portrait can be more powerful and than one that uses the modern engraving treatment.
Making the modern engraving

Download our Photoshop actions (see p. 146), and then follow these steps:

1. Open a photo in Photoshop.
2. Open the Action palette (Window > Actions), select the action you want to use, and hit play. ACLU Modern Engraving ROUGH is usually good for images that will be shown small or viewed at a distance (such as on signs and posters).

ACLU Modern Engraving FINE is better for mid-sized images and images printed in reading material (such as reports and brochures).

3. The action will run on its own. When the action has finished running, you will see multiple color options in your layers palette (Window > Layers). Turn one layer on at a time to see how it affects your image. Choose the one you want to use.

4. Now flatten and save your file using the ACLU export for PRINT or ACLU export for SCREEN action. These actions will end on the “save as” screen, and you can save it in any format you like (PNG or JPEG is best for screen, and PSD or TIF is best for print).

5. Test your image in your layout. If the engraving looks too fine, try going back and using the rough action, and vice versa. You can also try resizing your image before running the action.

For Expert Users

If you are importing your image into InDesign, you may find it easier to stop after step 2, without selecting any color layers. Run the ACLU export for INDESIGN action. You can then change the colors dynamically in InDesign:

To change the background color (clear by default), change the fill of the image frame;

to change the foreground color (black by default), select the image in the frame and change its fill.

This is often faster for advanced users. It’s also what you should do if you are printing in Pantone (PMS) inks.
Other Imagery

• Illustrations should add information. If you can’t find a photograph that suits your needs, your next thought may be to use an illustration. But like a photograph, an illustrations should deliver information — it shouldn’t just be decoration. Ask yourself if an illustration is essential or merely ornamental.

All this illustration does is indicate that it’s about making a call — but the text already says that. Without the illustration, the text can be bigger. This makes for a quicker read and higher impact.
• The color and style of illustrations should fit with our identity system. Look for simple, high-contrast styles that match the clean, straightforward style of our identity system.

When possible, illustrations should be shown in ACLU colors. If the colors clash, try changing them in Illustrator or Photoshop, or turn them into black and white (as long as you have permission to modify your selected image; check your usage license!).

• Seek permission, and give credit. Just like with photos, if you didn’t make the illustration yourself, you need to confirm permission, and always credit the artist or source. See p. 147 for more details.
The Statue of Liberty

- You can use Lady Liberty. Lady Liberty is no longer part of our logo, but she’s still a symbol of our principles.

“Everywhere immigrants have enriched and strengthened the fabric of American life.”
John F. Kennedy
• Vary the way she’s shown. Now that she’s no longer part of the logo, there’s no need to stick to a single crop, angle, or color.

• Let her be free: don’t make her into a logo. Don’t attach her to any of our logos. And don’t use her in place of our logo. Consistency is important in preserving a unified look.
Information Graphics

• Facts are facts: Let them speak for themselves. Information graphics are a good example of why pictures are not always necessary. If the facts are clear and meaningful, we don’t need to tell people how they should feel about them. Like everything we say, we’re confident in our numbers.

!Number of men still imprisoned at Guantanamo: 80

!50% of background checks conducted by the FBI included erroneous information
• Keep them simple and streamlined. Visual clutter is the enemy of clear information graphics. Don’t use special effects like 3-D shapes or shadows.

Try to keep grid lines to a minimum, too. A few lines may be necessary, but too many make charts and graphs look fussy. Our style is frank and straightforward.

- Expedited Removal
- Reinstatement
- Total Removals
Resources

A set of Photoshop actions for creating the modern engraving is available at www.aclu.org/PhotoEngravingTool.

There are many sites where you can obtain images legally.

ACLU shared images
Staff are encouraged to share their images with everyone at the ACLU. If you took the photo, commissioned the photo, or confirmed permission for broad general usage, please upload it to the Digital Asset Management System with a link on the Loop at https://www.acluloop.org/Pages/Image%20Library.aspx so others can use it. Check back often to see what your colleagues have uploaded.

General stock photos
These sites require that you set up an account, but once set up, you can easily purchase and download images.
- shutterstock.com
- bigstockphoto.com
- alamy.com
- photoability.net (photos of persons with disabilities)

Editorial and news-related stock photos
- pictures.reuters.com
- apimages.com

Public domain images
Sometimes, images fall out of the boundaries of copyright, such as works produced by the U.S. government or works created before 1923. These photos can be used freely.
- loc.gov
- archive.org (select images)
- dvidshub.net (military images)
- defense.gov/Media/Photo-Gallery (military images)

Creative Commons licenses
- commons.wikimedia.org
- freeimages.com
- pexels.com
- images.google.com (click tools, and under “usage rights,” select your desired license type)
- flickr.com (use the “all creative commons” or “modifications allowed” search)
FAQs

How do I find images that I can use?
You have several options: You can purchase a stock photo or illustration, find a free image that’s in the public domain, or find one that has a Creative Commons license. See the list of resources opposite.

What’s the deal with Creative Commons licenses?
As with stock photos, there are different types of Creative Commons (CC) licenses. Check the license and make sure its allowances align with your intended use. Here are some key things to look for:

Attribution
All Creative Commons licenses (except for CC0) require attribution.

Share-alike
If you use an image with a share-alike requirement, you’ll have to release your own work (featuring the image) with the same or less restrictive Creative Commons license. You won’t be able to deny anyone permission to use or publish what you’ve made.

Modifications Allowed
This is important if you want to use the modern engraving treatment or modify the image in any way.

Commercial Usage
You’ll need this if you want to sell the product you’re making with the image.

CC0
This license has absolutely no restrictions on usage. It’s the same as being in the public domain.

Do I need a photo credit?
Yes. We have a high bar in terms of photo attribution. Even if not required by the licensor, we include a credit to give a nod to where we got the image. Our standard credit is in the lower right corner of the image. Follow this simple formula: “photo: credit line” or “footage: credit line.”
How to combine elements in engaging and multilayered ways
Our visual identity has many ingredients. How do we combine them? One of the core ideas behind our visual identity is that we are layered: We are a chorus, not a corporation. What we make should look dynamic, human, and warm — never rigid, stodgy, or static.

• Build your file in layers: They provide richness and multiplicity.
Start with the background and layer on pictures, text boxes, and a logo. Don’t be afraid to let elements overlap. This creates nice depth!
• Asymmetry is dynamic.
  Centered layouts can look too conventional and static. Asymmetrical arrangements are more contemporary and have more movement.
• Angles add energy.
  Straight elements are calmer and more static. Angled elements have more energy. Consider which effect you want.

To keep things looking neat, limit it to one or two angled elements per piece!
• Text should contrast with the image below it. If the image is dark, make your text white or light. If it’s light, make your text dark.

  Text overlaid directly on an image can be very difficult to read for people with visual disabilities. Do it only when the text can be extra large and/or bold, and when your image is somewhat calm.
Note! Facebook penalizes your post if more than 20% of your image is covered by text. Use their tool to test your image before posting: facebook.com/ads/tools/text_overlay

Many other combinations are possible. Experiment! If it’s for print, do test prints to make sure the contrast is good on your printer.
• For busy backgrounds, put text in a box.

If your background image is just too busy or if it’s very high-contrast, you can always put text in a box.

• Or put your image into a box.

Another option is to make your image smaller so that it doesn’t fill up the entire background. Then you can position it so it stays clear of the text.
• Be careful of what you cover up. When layering a text box on top of other text, just touch the edge of the letters. If you cover too much, it may be hard to read. A good test is to ask someone to take a quick glance and see if they can read it immediately.

When layering a text box on an image, look for calm or unimportant areas that you can cover up without compromising the image.
Resources

There is no need to start your layout from scratch. There are many templates that you can use to begin.

Photoshop
Download templates for creating social posts at www.aclu.org/PhotoshopTemplates.
- breaking news posts
- victory posts
- quotations

Microsoft Office
Our basic Word document template includes type styles and colors so your letters, memos, one-pagers, and basic reports look polished. Download at www.aclu.org/MSOfficeTemplates.

InDesign
Download InDesign templates for longer and more advanced text documents at www.aclu.org/InDesignTemplates.
- brochures
- one-pagers
- wallet cards
- print-at-home cards
- reports
A Note on Accessibility

Disability rights is one of our core issues. To ensure everyone is able to access ACLU communications as easily as possible, we make sure all of our materials meet certain standards.

Color
Our color palette has been designed so that all of our colors are perceivable to people with color blindness or other visual disabilities.

All of the ACLU light + dark color combinations meet the highest WCAG (Web Content Accessibility Guidelines) standards \textit{when our text is size 18 pt. or above}. Contrast and legibility are negatively impacted when type is any smaller.

It may be difficult to read text that appears on top of the modern engraving. If your image is busy, make your text larger and bolder, or consider using a box.

Videos
Transcribe spoken text in captions. Include descriptions of sounds as well (e.g., “door closes”).
CAMPAIGNS AND SERIES

How to use our visual identity to make special campaigns and series
Sometimes we produce many materials on the same topic, theme, or initiative. We want these materials to go together, but we also want them to go with the overall ACLU identity system. The ACLU and ACLU affiliates should get credit for all of the work we do. Here’s how you can use our visual identity to stand out and fit in.

• Choose a color combination from our palette. Pick one or two to use throughout your series (in addition to ACLU red and ACLU blue).

This social posts and this brochure use ACLU red, ACLU blue, and ACLU light yellow.
• Choose a subset of our typefaces. Pick one or two styles of GT America, or choose Century Schoolbook. Use the same typeface for all headlines, titles, and hashtags.

“I live life on my own terms, thanks to Medicaid.”
Stacey Milbern

“I need Medicaid to get the care I need to get out of bed, dress, bathe, and eat every day. Without it, I couldn’t stay at the dream job I worked so hard to get.”
Andraéa LaVant
• Use a consistent image style and theme. The more consistency you have, the greater the connection between pieces. Choose images with similar framing, settings, and subjects.

  If you’re using illustrations, pick a single illustration style and stick with it. They should look like they are all drawn by the same hand.

Series with photographs:

Series with illustrations:

WEST VIRGINIA, YOU HAVE THE RIGHT TO REMAIN PRIVATE

YOU HAVE THE RIGHT TO REMAIN PRIVATE
• Include a national or an affiliate logo. The ACLU brand is very powerful. All of our campaigns, initiatives, special events, and departments benefit from being part of the ACLU family.

Every day, we see hundreds of logos for different products and organizations. The world is very cluttered. If we created a custom logo for each of our initiatives and campaigns, this would just add to the clutter — and dilute the power of the ACLU. Campaigns and initiatives should not have their own logos. See p. 83 for more on our official “brand architecture.”

After the execution drugs were injected, Joseph Wood repeatedly gasped for one hour and 40 minutes before death was pronounced.

CRUEL AND UNUSUAL
The case against the death penalty
Video Series

Video series follow the same general rules as print and digital campaigns. Each series has its own perspective and tone — but they all come from the ACLU.

• Choose a color combination from our palette.

A

Fired for Not Shooting

On May 6, 2016, officer Stephen Mader responded to a report of a domestic incident in Weirton, West Virginia.

Mader received deescalation and suicide prevention training as a Marine and a police officer.
• Choose a subset of our typefaces. Pick one or two styles of GT America, or choose Century Schoolbook.
• Use a consistent video or animation style. If using animation, use the same look for all videos in the series.

Denying children the care of a loving home under the guise of religious freedom is wrong, and we’re going to fight it.
• Use the ACLU “bug.” Keep the ACLU logo visible throughout your video. In video lingo, this is called a “bug.” Ours is the white logo in the upper-right corner. Keep this consistent across all videos.

THE ACLU IS CALLING FOR AN INVESTIGATION INTO THE INCIDENT.

Note that for thumbnails, the logo must move to the upper left. It can also be in red or blue, since it’s placed over a static background and its legibility can be ensured.

MINNESOTA POLICE OFFICER ASSAULTS MOTORIST
FAQs

What counts as a campaign?
The definition is flexible. Any time you want to create a set of materials that go together, it can be considered a campaign.

Can I introduce a new typeface for my campaign?
No. We already have so many typeface styles to choose from. Introducing additional variety to the system would make our work look disjointed.

We already have a custom logo for one of our projects. Can we keep using it?
It’s best to make a clean break. The power of the ACLU name lends credibility and authority to your project. Your audience will have no trouble recognizing that your project remains important, even without your custom logo.
INDEX
Index

accessibility 157; see also color and typography advertisements 52–55
angles see layout
apparel see merchandise boxes see text boxes
brand architecture 51, 83–86
brand voice see tone of voice
brochures 38, 40
buttons see merchandise
campaigns and series 38–41, 158–167
Century Schoolbook 20, 43, 47, 51, 53, 108–109, 111, 120, 122, 123, 160, 164; see also typography
CMYK 99, 101
composition see layout color 16, 29, 39, 43, 47, 51, 53, 57, 90–101, 159, 163
color and logos see logos contrast 94, 111, 152–153, 157 print vs. web 99, 101 red and blue rules 29, 54, 89, 92–93, 98 copyright 146–147
credits 130, 141, 147
Creative Commons 147
direct mail 60–61
Facebook 33, 36, 153
GT America 14, 29, 33, 39, 43–44, 51, 53, 57, 102–107, 111, 120, 122, 123, 160, 164; see also typography
images 18, 29, 39, 41, 43, 47, 51, 53, 57, 128–147, 161 illustrations 35, 41, 140–142, 161
information graphics 144–145
Lady Liberty 8, 10, 29, 35, 142–143 layering see layout
logos 24, 43, 51, 68–89, 166;
affiliate 39, 69–70, 75–80, 83–84, 87, 89
black and white printing 74, 77, 89, 98 chapter 80
color 29, 43, 44, 71, 72, 74, 75, 77, 89 custom logos 70, 86, 162, 167 foundation 72, 79
national 29, 39, 43, 47, 53, 57, 69–74, 83–84, 87, 89 on social media 28–37, 78, 87 placing logos in boxes 89 with tagline 119 marketing see direct mail
merchandise 38, 62–65
modern engraving 18, 29, 47, 51, 57, 135–139
newsletters 50–51
Pantone see PMS photographs 51, 129–134, 161; see also images and modern engraving pins see merchandise
PMS 99, 101
posters 56–57, 101, 107, 117, 120, 139; see also protest signs protest signs 58–59; see also posters quest 53, 125
reports 46–49, 97
RGB 99, 101
social media 28–37, 38, 40, 41
Statue of Liberty see Lady Liberty stock photography 47, 135–136, 146–147, store see merchandise tagline 57, 117–119, 125
templates 80, 156
text boxes 28, 34, 43, 44, 112–116, 153–155
tone of voice 29, 39, 47, 51, 53, 124–127
tote bags see merchandise
Twitter 37 (see also social media) typography 102–123, 160, 164, 167 (see also GT America, Century Schoolbook) legibility 33, 94, 97, 111, 112, 115, 152–155, 157 video 42–45, 163–165
We the People see tagline
Any Questions?

Please contact:
Jaweer Brown
ACLU National
125 Broad Street
New York NY 10004
(212) 284-7353
branding@aclu.org
Contributors

Open:
Jason Jude Chan, Maxime Gau, Clay Grable, Cat Kirk, Nicholas Lim, Martha Kang McGill, Steven Merenda, Greta Skagerlind, Scott Stowell

c:o:collective:
Marianne Bellorin, Sherri Chambers, Melissa Fry, Jessica Ghersi, Jamie Hall, Jason Heller, Trent Lyle, Stephanie Price, Tiffany Rolfe, Rosemarie Ryan, Jonny Shaw, Jon Zast

ACLU:
Democracy must not be a spectator sport. We — and we the people — must raise justice up and must bring peace to our nation and must come together.

Anthony Romero
Executive Director