about 600 to 800 feet away from us. As the blue passenger was traveling down the street myself and the vehicle for about 30 to 35 feet. Once the vehicle was within 75 to 100 feet away from us I myself raised my hand and pointed it at about 45 degrees in the direction of the vehicle hoping that he/she would take the same action as the rest of the person who was walking. But instead the situation escalated to us being shot. But before myself or was ok to take the shot I asked if I could say yes. So I shot the passenger and hit the car and into the air shots in the vehicle did not stop, still traveling at about 15 to 15 mph myself and my wife decided to disable the vehicle and shot on round into the engine.
After the shots were taken, the blue panel took a hard left, then right into a tree. At that point in time, we were not sure if the vehicle was a V35D or not. So we approached the vehicle still taking precautions and found out that one of the rear seats had gone through the window and hit the man in the head. We checked the vehicle out for VINs and discovered that there were no threats. So we still stood up to investigate the situation. After that was done, we went back to the original area and where we stood for the

My point of aim was into the engine block.

No other warning signs were put up just the road cones. /End of Statement/
On Sunday Feb 5 I was finishing taking care of a man local to town and his family. I left my head in the NaN closing my eyes when a loud sound like a weapon being fired startled me. I turned around to see a soldier fire his weapon. A second weapon discharge was heard almost immediately. I grabbed my aid bag and started running towards the fire. The soldier fired to the right of the NaN blocking the road and crashed. I couldn't see what the care had run into. I heard "medic" being called and took off running. As I ran I looked over the scene as I approached a blue suv that had hit a telephone pole. A soldier lay in a moans about getting knocked over towards the sleeping vehicle. Blood was visible. Brain matter and CS gas dripped from the rear window. I ran to the other side window. The window was rattled down. The man died. I looked inside and noticed the man no movement. I relayed the message that he was dead and directed back to the NaN dropped off my aid bag and returned to the scene. The police arrived at the what seemed like they were deciding how to remove the body from the area. I asked on interphone what they were saying. He said they think the IP had fired a shot. I walked over to LT and showed him the two bullet holes. He had entered the windshield passed the dashboard at an angle as to fig itself in the rear of the car.
A small hole was present in the fabric of the seat and a corresponding dent in the shape of a bullet was visible in the seat. I showed the LT that the bullet had hit the man's windbreak at an angle (see A). Since this time the TPs had the man out of the car again for closer inspection, they had taken his jacket from a neighboring house. I had put on my latex gloves and asked the man over, showing him where the bullet entered to the shell the man had reading glasses sitting on the dash board of his vehicle. There was a bullet which in the glass in the right place, the only way these places could have been hit was if they were on the man's forehead. The wound was consistent with an upward angle shot. The bullet had to be quite dense, otherwise it would have slanted to leave such an elastic in the man's head. The bullet was larger at the bottom and slanted upward to his hairline. The windscreen there were bloodstains that disappeared as I rolled his forehead. I assumed that once the blood was dissolved, the bloodline would have been visible again.
I was not on the patrol, but from my initial investigation the below statement is what I believe to be accurate.

The mission of the patrol was an area search with a purpose to gain intel for future ops. The patrol was tasked with the area of BAKRADI and while in the area the patrol was split to conduct a parking lot and talk with locals in the area. The patrol established a perimeter with routes and soldiers armed. 50 meters from the vehicles were set up in a blocking position on the road.  We were pulling security with the FOB of the area. The vehicle, VW PASSAT, was first seen at approx. 200m away from the soldiers and they used hand signals to get the vehicle to stop or drive a different direction. At approx. 100m away verbal commands were given in reconnection with the hand signals. The vehicle was traveling at approx. 15-20mph and was showing no signs of stopping. At approx. 50m, advancing that... was fired (5.56mm) over the vehicle, there was approx. a one to two second pause and both  and  fired one shot each with the intention to disable the vehicle. One round struck the hood of the vehicle and the other round went through the windshield hitting the driver in the forehead. The soldiers then took cover, but the vehicle veered off the road and stalled when it hit a light pole. A search of the vehicle found no other weapons. The medic on the scene attempted to render first aid, but pronounced the individual dead at wound, IJs, and the medic investigated the incident and determined that the shot which struck the driver in the forehead was a ricochet because of where the round entered the windshield was approx. 12 meters below where it struck the individual. The medic also concluded it was a ricochet due to the nature of the impact into the vehicle. Further investigation, it was not a clean entrance wound. From talking with the soldiers on the scene, the IJs also felt the vehicle was a possible UH-60 and took cover before the vehicle was finally stopped. The IJs found a cell phone number in the man's pocket and determined it was his son's cell number. They attempted to call but got no answer. I do not know if a claims card was issued, but I believe it was not. I also do not know the exact damage to the vehicle.

On Sunday, 26 Feb 66, we did a patrol in the Baladiyat area that we are in charge of, and we got accident by a UPEDD and our soldiers shot a man, three or four stands, and in the same time UPEDD came, one wench, with three guys. It was still and his two Sergeant. They saw the accident clearly, because they were driving to close to us. After that, they did jump on the ground to see the guy, and we found him dead. I asked the Sergeant if he saw the accident, and he answers as follow: we saw a car, was driving towards us. (American convoy) and I thought he is up top and he didn't stop.
