In the Supreme Court of the United States

JAMES OBERGEFELL, ET AL., AND BRITTANI HENRY, ET AL., PETITIONERS,

v.

RICHARD HODGES, DIRECTOR, OHIO DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, ET AL., RESPONDENTS.

[Additional Captions Listed on Inside of Cover]

ON PETITIONS FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SIXTH CIRCUIT

BRIEF OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTISTS AND THE BECKET FUND FOR RELIGIOUS LIBERTY AS AMICI CURIAE IN SUPPORT OF NEITHER PARTY

TODD MCFARLAND
Associate General Counsel
Office of General Counsel
General Conference of
Seventh-day Adventists
12501 Old Columbia Pike
Silver Spring, MD 20904

Andrew G. Schultz Rodey, Dickason, Sloan, Akin & Robb, P.A. 201 Third Street, NW Albuquerque, NM 87102 ERIC C. RASSBACH
Counsel of Record
HANNAH C. SMITH
ASMA T. UDDIN
The Becket Fund for
Religious Liberty
1200 New Hampshire
Ave. N.W., Suite 700
Washington, DC 20036
(202) 955-0095
erassbach@becketfund.org

Counsel for Amici Curiae

VALERIA TANCO, ET AL., PETITIONERS,

v.

WILLIAM EDWARD "BILL" HASLAM, GOVERNOR OF TENNESSEE, ET AL., RESPONDENTS.

APRIL DEBOER, ET AL., PETITIONERS,

v

RICK SNYDER, GOVERNOR OF MICHIGAN, ET AL.,  $\label{eq:RESPONDENTS} \text{RESPONDENTS}.$

GREGORY BOURKE, ET AL., AND TIMOTHY LOVE, ET AL., PETITIONERS,

v.

STEVE BESHEAR, GOVERNOR OF KENTUCKY, ET AL., RESPONDENTS.

QUESTION PRESENTED

How may the Court best protect religious liberty in ruling on the cases before it?

TABLE OF CONTENTS

			PAGE
QĮ	JES	STION PRESENTED	i
TA	BL	E OF CONTENTS	ii
TA	BL	E OF AUTHORITIES	iv
IN	TE	RESTS OF THE AMICI CURIAE	1
		ODUCTION AND MARY OF THE ARGUMENT	5
ΑF	RGU	JMENT	7
I.	mu of	ne Court's ruling on same-sex marriage ust recognize the importance and vitality religious liberty protections for ascientious objectors
II.	ma rok	cording legal recognition to same-sex arriage without preserving space for bust religious liberty protections will sult in wide-ranging church-state conflic	t10
	A.	Leading legal scholars on both sides of the marriage debate recognize the conflict between same-sex marriage and religious liberty and support existing legislative accommodations	13
	В.	Most laws proscribing sexual orientatio and gender-identity discrimination include religious liberty protections for conscientious objectors.

C. Most states that have adopted same-sex marriage legislatively have included religious liberty protections for conscientious objectors
•
D. Without religious liberty protections, broad-based church-state conflict
will result21
1. State and local government
penalties21
2. Private plaintiff lawsuits targeting religious defendants26
3. The need for accommodation29
III. Treating conscientious objection to same-sex marriage as "animus" or "invidious discrimination" would place in serious jeopardy hundreds of existing laws designed to protect
religious liberty
Tongroup inserty.
A. The Court's equal protection jurisprudence does not provide a clear method of analysis to resolve these appeals31
B. If the Court were to rely on "animus" or "invidious discrimination" as its form of analysis, existing state and local religious liberty protections
would be threatened35
CONCLUSION37
APPENDIX

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

CASES

Baskin v. Bogan, 766 F.3d 648 (7th Cir.)32	2
Bernstein v. Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Ass'n, No. DCR PN34XB-03008 (N.J. Off. of Att'y Gen., Div. on Civil Rts., Oct. 23, 2012)27	7
Bob Jones Univ. v. United States, 461 U.S. 574 (1983)25	5
Boy Scouts of Am. v. Till, 136 F. Supp. 2d 1295 (S.D. Fla. 2001)22	2
Butler v. Adoption Media, LLC, 486 F. Supp. 2d 1022 (N.D. Cal. 2007)27	7
Catholic Charities of Maine, Inc. v. City of Portland, 304 F. Supp. 2d 77 (D. Me. 2004)25
City of Cleburne, Tex. v. Cleburne Living Ctr., 473 U.S. 432 (1985)31	L
Corp. of Presiding Bishop of Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints v. Amos, 483 U.S. 327 (1987)8	3
Cradle of Liberty Council, Inc. v. City of Philadelphia, 851 F. Supp. 2d 936 (E.D. Pa. 2012)22	2
Dept. of Agriculture v. Moreno, 413 U.S. 528 (1973)34	1
Dept. of Health & Human Servs. v. Massachusetts, 133 S. Ct. 2887 (2013)32	2
EEOC v. Abercrombie & Fitch Stores, Inc., 731 F.3d 1106 (10th Cir. 2013)36	3

Evans v. City of Berkeley, 129 P.3d 394 (Cal. 2006)22
Gay Rights Coal. of Georgetown Univ. Law Ctr. v. Georgetown Univ., 536 A.2d 1 (D.C. 1987)27
Gonzales v. O Centro Espirita Beneficente Uniao Do Vegetal, 546 U.S. 418 (2006)9
Goodridge v. Dep't of Publ. Health, 798 N.E.2d 941 (Mass. 2003)11
Hobbie v. Unemployment Appeals Comm'n of Fla., 480 U.S. 136 (1987)8
Holt v. Hobbs, 135 S. Ct. 853 (2015)9
Hosanna-Tabor Evangelical Lutheran Church & Sch. v. EEOC, 132 S. Ct. 694 (2012)
Korte v. Sebelius, 735 F.3d 654 (7th Cir. 2013)8
Lawrence v. Texas, 539 U.S. 558 (2003)31
Levin v. Yeshiva Univ., 754 N.E.2d 1099 (N.Y. 2001)28
Massachusetts v. U.S. Dept. of Health & Human Servs., 682 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 2012)32
Parents Involved in Community Schools v. Seattle Sch. Dist. No. 1, 551 U.S. 701 (2007)31

Romer v. Evans, 517 U.S. 620 (1996)	33, 34, 35
Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398 (1963)	8
SmithKline Beecham Corp. v. Abbott Labs. 740 F.3d 471 (9th Cir. 2014)	*
Spencer v. World Vision, Inc., 633 F.3d 723 (9th Cir. 2011)	28
Thomas v. Review Bd., 450 U.S. 707 (1981)	9
United States v. Virginia, 518 U.S. 515 (1996)	31
United States v. Windsor, 133 S. Ct. 2675 (2013)	12
Walker v. Wolf, 135 S. Ct. 316 (2014)	32
Walz v. Tax Commission, 397 U.S. 664 (1970)	19
Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205 (1972)	8
Witt v. Dept. of the Air Force, 527 F.3d 806 (9th Cir. 2008)	33
STATUTES
Cal. Code Jud. Ethics, Canon 2C and Advisory Committee Commentary	22, 25
Cal. Educ. Code § 221	18
Cal. Ins. Code § 10119.6	18
Colo Rev Stat § 24-34-401	18

Colo. Rev. Stat. § 24-34-601	18
Conn. Gen. Stat. § 46b-22b	19
D.C. Code § 46-406(e)	20
Del. Code Ann. tit. 13, § 106(e)	19
Haw. Rev. Stat. § 572-12.1-12.2	19
Idaho Code Ann. § 67-5910	18
750 Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann. 5/209	19
Iowa Code § 216.7(2)(a)	18
Kan. Stat. Ann. § 44-1002	18
Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 344.040	28
Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 344.555	17
La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 49:146(A)(5)	17
102 Mass. Code Regs. § 1.03(1)	23
102 Mass. Code Regs. § 5.04(1)(c)	23
110 Mass. Code Regs. § 1.09(2)	23
Md. Code Ann. § 20-604	18
Md. Code Ann., Fam. Law §§ 2-201, 2-406	19
Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 19-A, § 655	19
Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. V, § 4553(10)(G)	17
Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. V, § 4573-A(2)	18
Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. V, § $4602(4)$	18
Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. 37.2202	28
Minn. Stat. § 363A.26	18
Minn. Stat. Ann. § 517.09, Subd. 2, 3	19
N.H. Rev. Stat. § 457:37	19

N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 354-A:1817	7
N.J. Rev. Stat. § 10:5-5(n)	3
N.M. Stat. Ann. § 28-1-918	3
N.Y. Dom. Rel. Law § 11(1)19	9
Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 4112.02(A)28	3
Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 3301.53(A)(3)28	3
Or. Rev. Stat. § 659A.006(2)18	3
43 Pa. Const. Stat. § 954(b)17	7
R.I. Gen. Laws Ann. § 15-3-6.119	9
Tenn. Code Ann. § 4-21-40128	3
Vt. Stat. Ann. 9 § 4502(l)19	9
Wash. Rev. Code § 26.04.01020	Э
Wash. Rev. Code Ann. § 49.60.21517	7
OTHER AUTHORITIES
Andrew Koppelman, You Can't Hurry Love: Why Antidiscrimination Protections for Gay People Should Have Religious Exemptions, 72 Brook. L. Rev. 125 (2006)	6
Boy Scouts of America Statement, Boy Scouts of America (May 23, 2013)22	2
D. Smith, Accreditation committee decides to keep religious exemption, 33 Monitor on Psychology 16 (Jan. 2002)23	3
David Blankenhorn & Jonathan Rauch,  A Reconciliation on Gay Marriage,  N.Y. Times, Feb. 21, 2009, at WK1116	6

Douglas Laycock, The Religious Exceptions Debate, 11 Rutgers J.L. & Religion 139 (2009)18
Gerald Gunther, The Supreme Court, 1971 Term – Foreword: In Search of Evolving Doctrine on a Changing Court: A Model for a Newer Equal Protection, 86 Harv. L. Rev. 1 (1972)
Hutchinson, Kan. Human Relations Commission,  Definitions and FAQs under Proposed  Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity  Protections (2012)
Ira C. Lupu & Robert W. Tuttle, Same-Sex Family Equality and Religious Freedom, 5 Nw. J. L. & Soc. Pol'y 274 (2010)15
Kenji Yoshino, Why the Court can strike down marriage restrictions under rational-basis review, SCOTUSblog (Aug. 23, 2011)
Letter from Prof. Douglas Laycock and others to Hawaii legislators (Oct. 23, 2013)15
Letter from Prof. Edward McGaffney, Jr. and others to Hawaii legislators (Oct. 17, 2013)14
Melissa Walker,  YMCA rewrites rules for lesbian couples, Des Moines Register, Aug. 6, 200727
Michael W. McConnell, Accommodation of Religion, 1985 Sup. Ct. Rev. 1,8
Michelle Boorstein, Citing same-sex marriage bill, Washington Archdiocese ends foster-care program, Wash. Post, Feb. 17, 201024
Patricia Wen, "They Cared for the Children": Amid Shifting Social Winds, Catholic Charities Prepares to End Its 103 Years of Finding Homes for Foster Children and Evolving Families, Boston Globe, June 25, 200623

Robin Fretwell Wilson, A Matter of Conviction: Moral Clashes Over Same-Sex Adoption, 22 BYU J. Pub. L. 475 (2008)
Robin Fretwell Wilson, Marriage of Necessity: Same- Sex Marriage and Religious Liberty Protections, 64 Case W. Res. L. Rev. 1161 (2014)21
Same-Sex Marriage and Religious Liberty: Emerging Conflicts (Douglas Laycock, Anthony R. Picarello, Jr. & Robin Fretwell Wilson eds., 2008) passim
Sarah Eekhoff Zylstra, Evangelicals' Favorite Same- Sex Marriage Law?, Christianity Today, Jan. 17, 201420
Thomas Berg, Archive: Memos/Letters on Religious Liberty and Same-Sex Marriage, Mirror of Justice (Aug. 2, 2009)
Thomas Berg, Response from Scholars Supporting "Marriage Conscience" Religious Liberty Protection, Mirror of Justice (Nov. 7, 2013)15
Thomas Curwen, State high court's vote affecting Scout affiliation stirs debate anew, L.A. Times, Jan. 24, 201525
Vivian Berger et al., Summary Judgment Benchmarks for Settling Employment Discrimination Lawsuits, 23 Hofstra Lab. & Emp. L.J. 45 (2005)11
William N. Eskridge, Jr., A Jurisprudence of "Coming Out": Religion, Homosexuality, and Collisions of Liberty and Equality in

American Law,
106 Yale L.J. 2411	, 2456 (1997) .	16

INTERESTS OF THE AMICI CURIAE<sup>1</sup>

The General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists is the highest administrative level of the Seventh-day Adventist church and represents over 75,000 congregations with more than 18 million members worldwide. In the United States, the North American Division of the General Conference oversees the work of more than 5,200 congregations with more than one million members. The Adventist Church operates the largest protestant educational system in the world. Within the United States, the Adventist Church operates 736 primary schools, 117 secondary schools, and 13 institutions of higher learning. The church operates 65 healthcare institutions in the United States. The Church also operates publishing houses, an international development NGO, and numerous community services centers. All of these organizations are equal expressions of the Church's mission. The Church has a strong interest in being able to continue all of its forms of ministry and still adhere to its understanding of scripture and God's commands.

Since its founding, the Seventh-day Adventist Church has a long commitment to religious liberty. From its earliest days, the Adventist Church experienced conflicts between its values and the requirements of governments. Through its own programs and the work of the International Religious Liberty Association founded in 1893, the Adventist Church has worked to guarantee religious liberty for all people in the United States and around the world.

Pursuant to this Court's Rule 37.6, counsel for amici curiae certifies that no part of this brief was authored by counsel for any party, and no such counsel or party made a monetary contribution to the preparation or submission of the brief. Consent from all Petitioners is being submitted to the Clerk with this brief. All Respondents have filed blanket consents with the Clerk.

The Adventists Church's stance on marriage and the appropriate expression of human sexuality is clear and long standing. The Church's Fundamental Belief on Marriage and the Family states: "Marriage was divinely established in Eden and affirmed by Jesus to be a lifelong union between a man and a woman in loving companionship." The Church also believes that "all people, regardless of their sexual orientation, are loved by God. We do not condone singling out any group for scorn and derision, let alone abuse."

The Adventist Church's biblically based stance has not changed and will not change regardless of this Court's ruling. That the Church has chosen to file the present brief in support of neither party should not be viewed in any way as compromising, weakening, or stepping away from its belief or a willingness to do so. Rather, this posture reflects that the Church's stance (which long predates any discussion of same sex marriage) is based upon its obligation to be obedient to the Bible and God's commands. The constitutional analysis this Court must undertake is entirely different than the lens through which the Church views marriage.

The Church recognizes, however, that the Court's ruling can have a significant impact on its ability to carry out its mission unless appropriate religious liberty protections are in place. The Church asks that, if a constitutional right to same-sex marriage is found to exist, this secular conclusion not be imposed upon the many manifestations of its sacred work.

The Becket Fund for Religious Liberty is a nonprofit, nonpartisan law firm dedicated to protecting the free expression of all religious traditions. The Becket Fund has represented agnostics, Buddhists, Christians, Hindus, Jews, Muslims, Santeros, Sikhs, and Zoroastrians, among others, in lawsuits across the country and around the world. It is frequently involved, both as counsel of record and as amicus curiae, in cases seeking to preserve the freedom of all religious people to pursue their beliefs without excessive government interference.

The Becket Fund has also represented religious people and institutions with a wide variety of views about same-sex marriage and homosexuality, including religious people and institutions on all sides of the same-sex marriage debate, and including both non-LGBT and LGBT clients. As a religious liberty law firm, the Becket Fund does not take a position on same-sex marriage as such, but focuses instead on same-sex marriage only as it relates to religious liberty.

The Becket Fund has long sought to facilitate scholarly discussion of the impact that legal recognition of same-sex marriage will have on religious liberty. Ten vears ago, it hosted a conference of noted First Amendment scholars—representing the full spectrum of views on same-sex marriage—to assess the religious freedom implications of legally-recognized same-sex marriage. The conference resulted in the book Same-Sex Marriage and Religious Liberty: Emerging Conflicts (Douglas Laycock, Anthony R. Picarello, Jr. & Robin Fretwell Wilson eds., 2008) ("Emerging Conflicts"). Emerging Conflicts began the scholarly discourse about the intersection of same-sex marriage and religious liberty. Since then, the Becket Fund has filed amicus briefs urging courts across the country to create space for legislative compromises with respect to the conflict between religious liberty and recognition of same-sex marriage.

Based on its expertise in the field of religious liberty generally, and the intersection of same-sex marriage and religious liberty specifically, the Becket Fund joins this brief to urge the Court to ensure that its ruling preserves space for legislative and regulatory accommodations for religious objectors both in the specific context of same-sex marriage and in the broader context of LGBT rights generally.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

Although religious liberty does not appear on the face of the questions presented, the Court's decision in these cases will nevertheless have unavoidable and wide-ranging implications for religious liberty. If the Court rules in favor of Petitioners, then the decision will result in the recognition of same-sex marriage by the states that have not done so already, and some incremental harm to religious liberty will necessarily follow. If the Court rules in favor of Respondents, then many states will still have same-sex marriage, and some will not. Either way, the tension between protecting religious liberty and laws enforcing same-sex marriage will continue and will result in future conflicts, some of which inevitably will reach this Court.

This brief does not address the question of marriage itself, but instead focuses on the question of religious liberty. For religious people, not just the result, but the manner in which the Court reaches its decision in these appeals is of great importance. Will the Court's ruling preserve space for religious beliefs, or will the Court's reasoning render accommodations for sincere religious objections constitutionally suspect?

The question is not an idle one. As we explain in detail in our brief, hundreds of laws nationwide provide accommodations for religious conscientious objectors in the context of same-sex marriage, sexual orientation anti-discrimination, gender identity anti-discrimination, and the like. And if same-sex marriage is adopted nationwide, it is reasonable to expect that many more accommodations for religious organizations and individuals will be proposed and debated.

The Court's ruling in these appeals cannot lay to rest the continuing conflicts between religious liberty and a legally mandated right of same-sex couples to marry. It is for precisely that reason that the Court must appreciate the impact that both its holding—and its reasoning—will have on the ability to protect religious liberty.

Amici have compiled a non-exhaustive catalog of the existing state laws prohibiting gender, marital status, and sexual orientation discrimination and identifying the religious exemptions (if any) for each such law. See Appendix 2a-39a. This listing is but a sample of the kinds and number of laws that could be affected by recognition of same-sex marriage. See Appendix 2a-39a.

In particular, if the Court were to utilize an analysis that the laws before the Court are rooted in "animus" or "invidious" discrimination and thus fail to comply with the Equal Protection Clause, the numerous accommodations to the types of state laws reflected in the Appendix would be imperiled. It would be argued that these accommodations reflect a desire to harm same-sex couples, rather than an effort to protect conscientious objectors.

Because these cases will set the parameters of the debate over issues of religious liberty as they relate to same-sex marriage, the Court should not foreclose states' ability to moderate these potential conflicts by providing accommodations for conscientious objectors.

ARGUMENT

 The Court's ruling on same-sex marriage must recognize the importance and vitality of religious liberty protections for conscientious objectors.

If this Court finds that the Fourteenth Amendment requires a state to license a marriage between two people of the same sex, then it also must acknowledge the religious liberty implications of such a ruling. These issues are far ranging and go well beyond the borders of the present appeals. As a result, the Court need not—and cannot—resolve these questions today. But at the same time, the Court should show its awareness both of the religious liberty repercussions of its holding and of the fact that those issues will need to be addressed in future cases.

Marriage has both legal and religious dimensions. As a legal relationship, the institution of marriage impacts everything from inheritance rights to evidentiary privileges; from insurance coverage to statutory wrongful death benefits. From the perspective of many religious groups, marriage is both a biblical commandment and a sacred union. In this case, the Court will set out the constitutional contours of civil marriage. But its holding cannot alter a religion's delineation of what constitutes a proper marriage, given that the government may not dictate "an internal church decision that affects the faith and mission of the church itself." Hosanna-Tabor Evangelical Lutheran Church & Sch. v. EEOC, 132 S. Ct. 694, 707 (2012). So long as religious organizations and religious authorities hold the theologically-based belief that same-sex marriage cannot be sanctioned, there will be a need to recognize their constitutionally guaranteed rights and preserve the ensuing issues of religious liberty that will follow when they seek to enforce those rights.

Religion is singled out in the Constitution for the special protections afforded by the Religion Clauses of the First Amendment. And as one noted scholar has observed, "religious liberty is the central value and animating purpose of the Religion Clauses." Michael W. McConnell, Accommodation of Religion, 1985 Sup. Ct. Rev. 1, 1. Indeed, "[t]he values underlying [the Religion Clauses] * * * have been zealously protected, sometimes even at the expense of other interests of admittedly high social importance." Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 214 (1972).

"One obvious and intuitive aspect of religious liberty is the right of conscientious objection to laws and regulations that conflict with conduct prescribed or proscribed by an adherent's faith." Korte v. Sebelius, 735 F.3d 654, 677 (7th Cir. 2013). For this very reason, "[t]his Court has long recognized that the government may (and sometimes must) accommodate religious practices * * * ." Corp. of Presiding Bishop of Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints v. Amos, 483 U.S. 327, 334 (1987) (quoting Hobbie v. Unemployment Appeals Comm'n of Fla., 480 U.S. 136, 144-145 (1987)).

Any number of cases exemplify this doctrine. See, e.g., Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398 (1963) (granting religious exemption to Seventh-day Adventist who was denied unemployment compensation benefits after she lost her job for refusing to work on her Sabbath day); Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205 (1972) (allowing religious exemption to Amish families who challenged the application of a state compulsory-education law requiring their children to attend public school through age 16); Thomas v. Review Bd., 450

U.S. 707 (1981) (creating religious exemption for a Jehovah's Witness denied unemployment compensation benefits after he was fired for declining a job transfer to a department that produced war materials); Gonzales v. O Centro Espirita Beneficente Uniao Do Vegetal, 546 U.S. 418 (2006) (requiring exception to Controlled Substances Act to allow use of otherwise-banned sacramental tea by members of a Brazilian church). Cf. Holt v. Hobbs, 135 S. Ct. 853, 860 (2015) (explaining that the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act of 2000 provides "expansive protection for religious liberty.").

The protection given by this Court to religious objectors in a wide range of circumstances emphasizes the high value our nation places on religious freedom. As shown in the next section, see Section II(B), infra, this solicitude for religious liberty extends beyond these rulings, and is further shown by the significant number of states that have enacted some form of exemption from anti-discrimination laws for religious organizations and individuals of conscience.

Should the Court recognize same-sex civil marriage, religious organizations and conscientious objectors will rely on these exemptions as a protection against being compelled to condone or facilitate marriages which run counter to their fundamental beliefs. But these kinds of religious accommodations can serve an effective bulwark for religious liberty after the Court's ruling in the present appeals only if the Court makes clear that religious exemptions are not disfavored and represent a proper means of balancing societal interests. A ruling that is ambiguous or silent about religious liberty protections in this context would inevitably cast suspicion on religious objectors. Lower courts will likely split on whether longstanding religious practices constitute prima facie evidence of anti-gay discrimination, instead of what they are: expressions of sincere religious belief.

The confines of these cases do not allow the Court to resolve all possible conflicts between religious liberty and legal recognition of same-sex marriage. These struggles will arise in any number of areas of life involving education, business, charitable activities, family law, and housing. Given the prospect of that long struggle, the Court should endeavor to shape its ruling in these appeals to ensure civility and mutual respect within that wider area of litigation. And the Court can go a long way towards making the debate civil by acknowledging the religious aspect of its ruling, expressly preserving existing statutory and regulatory religious accommodations, and making future religious accommodations possible. These steps will ensure that these issues can be debated and resolved appropriately in future cases.

II. According legal recognition to same-sex marriage without preserving space for robust religious liberty protections will result in wideranging church-state conflict.

Recognizing a constitutional right to same-sex marriage without simultaneously protecting conscience rights will trigger threats to the religious liberty of people and organizations who cannot, as a matter of conscience, treat same-sex unions as the moral equivalent of opposite-sex marriage. Several factors indicate that, without such protections, widespread and intractable church-state conflicts will result.

First, the relatively short history of same-sex marriage thus far indicates that there will be a great deal of litigation in the future. The first state to give civil recognition to same-sex marriage was Massachusetts, in 2003, and every other state to recognize same-sex marriage has done so within the last six years.<sup>2</sup> Even so, litigation over this issue is continuing. And because litigation under anti-discrimination laws tends to increase exponentially over time, the presence of these lawsuits is a strong indicator of many more lawsuits to come.<sup>3</sup> Even after this Court rules in the cases before it, the scope of potential conflict between religious liberty and same-sex marriage—absent robust religious accommodations—will continue to be widespread.

Second, a ruling from this Court that objecting to same-sex marriage is always irrational, is based on "animus" or "invidious discrimination," or that making distinctions regarding same-sex marriage constitutes gender or sexual-orientation discrimination, will have two major negative effects on religious objectors. One is that they will be vulnerable to lawsuits under anti-discrimination laws never designed for that purpose. In the Appendix, we have set forth a non-exhaustive list of the many state laws prohibiting gender, marital status, and sexual orientation discrimination and identifying the religious exemptions, if any for each such law. These laws could be triggered by recognition of same-sex marriage. See Appendix 2a-39a.

&lt;sup>2</sup> Goodridge v. Dep't of Publ. Health, 798 N.E.2d 941 (Mass. 2003); Connecticut (2008); Iowa (2009); Vermont (2009); New Hampshire (2010); Washington, D.C. (2010); New York (2011); Washington (2012); Maine (2013); Maryland (2013); California (2013); New Mexico (2013); Hawaii (2013); Minnesota (2013); Delaware (2013); New Jersey (2013); Rhode Island (2013); Illinois (2014); Utah (2014); Oklahoma (2014); Virginia (2014); Wisconsin (2014); Indiana (2014); Nevada (2014); Idaho (2014); Oregon (2014); Pennsylvania (2014); Arizona (2014); Wyoming (2014); Kansas (2014).

&lt;sup>3</sup> See, e.g., Vivian Berger et al., Summary Judgment Benchmarks for Settling Employment Discrimination Lawsuits, 23 Hofstra Lab. & Emp. L.J. 45, 45 (2005) ("The number of employment discrimination lawsuits rose continuously throughout the last three decades of the twentieth century. In the federal courts, such filings grew 2000% * * * *.").

The other negative effect is that this Court's disapprobation would cast suspicion on religious objectors. Should this Court conclude that there can be no legal distinction between opposite- and same-sex marriages, these longstanding practices will suddenly become prima facie evidence of anti-gay discrimination, instead of expressions of longstanding moral worldviews that put opposite-sex marriage at the center of human sexuality. As this Court noted less than two years ago in United States v. Windsor, 133 S. Ct. 2675, 2689 (2013), "marriage between a man and a woman * * had been thought of by most people as essential to the very definition of that term and to its role and function throughout the history of civilization."

Given these factors, it is not surprising that a scholarly consensus has emerged that giving legal recognition to same-sex marriage may result in widespread and foreseeable church-state conflict. The Court can expect that legislative exemptions will not resolve all of these conflicts, and that conscientious objectors will raise constitutional claims—involving free exercise, free speech, and equal protection issues—that the Court may need to address in the future.

Some scholars argue that the rights of religious believers should nearly always give way to the right of gays and lesbians to be free from discrimination.<sup>4</sup> Others support strong exemptions for objecting religious believers.<sup>5</sup> But there is widespread scholarly agreement that the conflict is coming. And given the certainty of those conflicts, it would be prudent for this Court to stay its hand and allow the political process an opportunity to mitigate those conflicts.

A. Leading legal scholars on both sides of the marriage debate recognize the conflict between same-sex marriage and religious liberty and support legislative accommodations.

In the Emerging Conflicts book, seven prominent scholars of First Amendment law agreed that legal recognition of same-sex marriage, without more, would create widespread conflicts with religious liberty. See, e.g., Marc D. Stern, Same-Sex Marriage and the Churches, in Emerging Conflicts 1, 1 (describing scope of anticipated conflicts). Leading LGBT rights advocate Chai Feldblum argued that conscientious objections to same-sex marriage are legitimate:

I believe those who advocate for LGBT equality have downplayed the impact of such [anti-discrimination] laws on some people's religious beliefs and, equally, I believe those who have sought religious exemptions from such civil rights laws have downplayed the impact that such exemptions would have on LGBT people.

&lt;sup>4</sup> Chai R. Feldblum, Moral Conflict and Conflicting Liberties, in Emerging Conflicts 123, 154.

Douglas Laycock, Afterword, in Emerging Conflicts 189, 197-201.

Chai R. Feldblum, Moral Conflict and Conflicting Liberties, in Emerging Conflicts 123, 125. Feldblum treated religious liberty concerns as well-founded, although she ultimately concluded that religious claims should fail. See id. at 155-56.

Others, such as leading religious liberty scholar Douglas Laycock—who likewise supports giving legal recognition to same-sex marriage—argue that some conflicts between same-sex marriage and religious liberty are unavoidable, but some could be mitigated by providing conscience protections. See, e.g., Douglas Laycock, Afterword, in Emerging Conflicts 189, 197-201.

In addition to the scholarly consensus that serious conflicts between same-sex marriage and religious liberty exist, there also is a scholarly consensus that the conflict should be addressed by legally recognized exemptions for conscientious objectors. The focus of the scholarly debate, therefore, is not over whether there should be exemptions, but rather, concerns what the form and scope of those exemptions should be.

For example, legal scholars who support (or who are neutral towards) the adoption of same-sex marriage have written a series of detailed open letters to legislators in states considering same-sex marriage legislation, arguing that threats to religious liberty should be legislatively addressed. See, e.g., Letter from Prof. Edward McGaffney, Jr. and others to Hawaii legislators (Oct. 17, 2013), http://mirrorofjustice.blogs.com/files/hawaii-special-session-letter-10-17-13.pdf (describing proposed religious protections); Letter from Prof. Douglas Laycock and others to Hawaii legislators (Oct. 23, 2013), http://mirrorofjustice.blogs.com/files/hawaii-2013-fall-based.docx (supporting both same-sex marriage and strong religious exemptions). These scholars have also presented testimony to state legislative bodies considering religious liberty protections. See also Thomas Berg, Archive: Memos/Letters on Religious Liberty and Same-Sex Marriage, Mirror of Justice (Aug. 2, 2009), http://mirrorofjustice.blogs.com/mirrorofjustice/2009/08/ memosletters-on-religious-liberty-and-samesex-marriage.html ("Archive") (complete collection of scholarly letters and legislative testimony). Other scholars have acknowledged the need for exemptions, although they disagree about the scope of the religious liberty protections that should be enacted. This disagreement has resulted in an ongoing and vigorous debate about the proper scope of exemptions.<sup>7</sup>

Leading scholars within the LGBT rights movement also advocate legislative protections for religious objectors. Professor William Eskridge of Yale has written that "Gay rights advocates put [the religious exemption] provision in ENDA, and it should be retained." Professor Andrew Koppelman of Northwestern and Jonathan Rauch of the Brookings Institution

 $<sup>^6</sup>$  See Ira C. Lupu & Robert W. Tuttle, Same-Sex Family Equality and Religious Freedom, 5 Nw. J. L. & Soc. Pol'y 274 (2010).

&lt;sup>7</sup> See, e.g., Thomas Berg, Response from Scholars Supporting "Marriage Conscience" Religious Liberty Protection, Mirror of Justice (Nov. 7, 2013), http://mirrorofjustice.blogs.com/mirrorofjustice/2013/11/response-on-same-sex-marriage-and-religious-liberty.html (describing scholarly debate over Illinois provisions).

&lt;sup>8</sup> William N. Eskridge, Jr., A Jurisprudence of "Coming Out": Religion, Homosexuality, and Collisions of Liberty and Equality in both have advocated legislative accommodations as a solution to the conflict between same-sex marriage and religious liberty.<sup>9</sup>

There is thus a scholarly consensus that the conflicts between same-sex marriage and religious liberty are real, deeply rooted, and far-reaching. And, although they disagree about the details, scholars have reached a separate consensus that these conflicts can be significantly mitigated by carefully-crafted exemptions.

These consensus positions reinforce the commonsense conclusion that state legislators act rationally when they choose to reject giving legal recognition to same-sex marriage without conscience protections. And they counsel judicial restraint in the cases before the Court.

B. Most laws proscribing sexual orientation and gender-identity discrimination include religious liberty protections for conscientious objectors.

The attached Appendix contains a catalog of state anti-discrimination laws. All 50 states legislatively have enacted some form of anti-discrimination protection for their citizens. These statutes protect individuals in a wide number of contexts: employment, education, housing, receipt of social services and government contracts, access to public accommodations, and extension of credit are among the most common. See Appendix 2a-37a. These laws reflect the nearly-universal recognition that individuals are entitled to be treated fairly and without regard to individual characteristics— such as race or gender— that have no meaningful relation to their exercise of fundamental rights.

American Law, 106 Yale L.J. 2411, 2456 (1997) (referring to proposed Employment Non-Discrimination Act).

&lt;sup>9</sup> See, e.g., Andrew Koppelman, You Can't Hurry Love: Why Antidiscrimination Protections for Gay People Should Have Religious Exemptions, 72 Brook. L. Rev. 125 (2006); David Blankenhorn & Jonathan Rauch, A Reconciliation on Gay Marriage, N.Y. Times, Feb. 21, 2009, at WK11.

That the states have legislated protection from discrimination is not surprising. What is more notable is that over two-thirds of the states also have enacted some form of exemption from these laws for religious organizations and individuals of conscience. See Appendix 1a.

These exemptions govern antidiscrimination laws based on sexual orientation, gender or gender identity, and marital status. <sup>10</sup> These exemptions also apply in a wide-ranging array of circumstances. Some are narrowly drafted to apply solely to religious educational institutions. <sup>11</sup> Others are more expansive and cover any religious or denominational institutions or organizations. <sup>12</sup> Some statutes permit religious groups to be exempt only from anti-discrimination laws governing employment,<sup>13</sup> education,<sup>14</sup> housing,<sup>15</sup> insurance coverage,<sup>16</sup> or public accommodations.<sup>17</sup> Others give wide latitude to religious institutions to ensure that its employees conform to their religious tenets.<sup>18</sup>

&lt;sup>10</sup> See Appendix.

 $<sup>^{11}</sup>$  See, e.g., Wash. Rev. Code Ann. § 49.60.215; Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 344.555; La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 49:146(A)(5).

 $<sup>^{12}</sup>$  See, e.g., Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. V, § 4553(10)(G); N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 354-A:18; 43 Pa. Const. Stat. § 954(b).

In addition to these specifically enacted religious exemptions to state anti-discrimination laws, twenty states have chosen to provide additional protection for religious liberty through their state constitutions and state Religious Freedom Restoration Acts. <sup>19</sup> Other states have determined that their state constitutions protect the exercise of religion from neutral and generally applicable laws. <sup>20</sup>

The Court needs to be aware of the sheer number and variety of these state efforts to protect and secure religious liberty. And the Court needs to be sensitive to the impact that its ruling in the present appeals

 $<sup>^{13}</sup>$  See, e.g., Colo. Rev. Stat. § 24-34-401; Idaho Code Ann. § 67-5910; Md. Code Ann. § 20-604.

 $<sup>^{14}</sup>$  See, e.g., Cal. Educ. Code § 221; Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. V, § 4602(4); Minn. Stat. § 363A.26.

 $<sup>^{15}</sup>$  See, e.g., N.J. Rev. Stat. § 10:5-5(n); N.M. Stat. Ann. § 28-1-9; Or. Rev. Stat. § 659A.006(2).

&lt;sup>16</sup> See Cal. Ins. Code § 10119.6.

 $<sup>^{17}</sup>$  See, e.g., Colo. Rev. Stat. § 24-34-601; Kan. Stat. Ann. § 44-1002; Iowa Code § 216.7(2)(a).

&lt;sup>18</sup> See Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. V, § 4573-A(2).

&lt;sup>19</sup> See states designated with * in Appendix.

 $<sup>^{20}</sup>$  Douglas Laycock, The Religious Exceptions Debate, 11 Rutgers J.L. & Religion 139, 142-43 n.17 (2009) (listing states and citations).

could have on the continuing vitality and effectiveness of these state laws. As Justice Brennan noted, "government grants exemptions to religious organizations because they uniquely contribute to the pluralism of American society by their religious activities." At the very least, the Court needs to ensure that further creation of religious exemptions, and application of existing religious exemptions in future circumstances, will not be foreclosed when states choose to recognize the need for them in their jurisdictions.

C. Most states that have adopted same-sex marriage legislatively have included religious liberty protections for conscientious objectors.

Twelve states—Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Illinois, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New York, Rhode Island, Vermont, and Washington—and the District of Columbia have adopted same-sex marriage by legislative action. Although their laws vary, and no state has provided complete protection to conscientious objectors, each jurisdiction has attempted to address the conflicts between same-sex marriage and religious liberty by providing accommodations for conscientious objectors.<sup>22</sup> For example, all

 $<sup>^{21}</sup>$  Walz v. Tax Commission, 397 U.S. 664, 692 (1970) (Brennan, J. concurring).

<sup>Conn. Gen. Stat. § 46b-22b (2009); Del. Code Ann. tit. 13, § 106(e) (2013); Haw. Rev. Stat. § 572-12.1-12.2 (2013); 750 Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann. 5/209 (2014); Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 19-A, § 655 (2012); Md. Code Ann., Fam. Law §§ 2-201, 2-406 (2013); Minn. Stat. Ann. § 517.09, Subd. 2, 3 (2013); N.H. Rev. Stat. § 457:37 (2010); N.Y. Dom. Rel. Law § 11(1) (2014); R.I. Gen. Laws Ann. § 15-3-6.1 (2013); Vt. Stat. Ann. 9 § 4502(l) (2009);</sup> of these jurisdictions exempt clergy and religious organizations from being required to officiate or solemnize a same-sex wedding if that would be inconsistent with their religious beliefs.<sup>23</sup> Although such exemptions may provide the constitutional minimum, they are not the only form of permissible protection for religious liberty.<sup>24</sup>

This experience—that every state legislature to adopt same-sex marriage has paired same-sex marriage legislation with religious liberty protections—is strong evidence counseling in favor of federal judicial restraint. Moreover, the fact that every state legislature to address same-sex marriage has recognized the conflict with religious liberty is also strong evidence that this concern is rational. Put another way, if protecting religious liberty is irrational, then all of these legislatures were acting irrationally at the time they passed legislation adopting same-sex marriage.

The truth, of course, is that the state legislatures and voters who adopted these laws have attempted to balance competing legitimate societal interests. And that is something that state political actors—legislatures and electorates—can do far more easily than the federal judiciary. See generally Robin Fretwell Wilson, Marriage of Necessity: Same-Sex Marriage and Religious Liberty Protections, 64 Case W. Res. L. Rev. 1161 (2014) (describing political and legal landscape surrounding legislative religious accommodations).

Wash. Rev. Code § 26.04.010 (2012); D.C. Code § 46-406(e) (2013).

&lt;sup>23</sup> Sarah Eekhoff Zylstra, Evangelicals' Favorite Same-Sex Marriage Law?, Christianity Today, Jan. 17, 2014, available at http://www.christianitytoday.com/ct/2014/january-web-only/evangelicals-favorite-same-sex-marriage-law-oklahoma-utah.html.

&lt;sup>24</sup> See Archive, supra (model legislation developed by leading church-state scholars that both adopts same-sex marriage and provides adequate protection for religious liberty concerns).

D. Without religious liberty protections, broad-based church-state conflict will result.

If same-sex marriage is given legal recognition without concurrent protections for individuals and institutions with conscientious objections, then religious institutions face the risk of significant new sources of civil liability.

What follows is a non-exhaustive description of the kinds of conflicts that will be triggered if any protection afforded to same-sex marriage is not paired with religious liberty protections.

1. State and local government penalties

Adopting same-sex marriage exposes religious organizations to the denial of generally available government benefits. Where same-sex marriage is adopted without religious protections, those who conscientiously object to such marriages can be labeled unlawful "discriminators" and thus denied access to otherwise generally available state and local government benefits.

For example, religious institutions that object to same-sex marriage will face challenges to their ability to access a diverse array of government facilities and fora. This is borne out in the reaction to the Boy Scouts' membership standards regarding homosexual conduct.<sup>25</sup> The Boy Scouts have had to fight to gain equal access to public after-school facilities<sup>26</sup>, they have lost leases to city campgrounds and parks,<sup>27</sup> and have also lost a lease to a government building that served as their headquarters for 79 years.<sup>28</sup> And the California Supreme Court recently adopted a rule that prohibits California state judges from participating in the Boy Scouts, for example, as Scoutmasters. See Cal. Code Jud. Ethics, Canon 2C and Advisory Committee Commentary (amended Jan. 21, 2015). If same-sex marriage is adopted without robust protections for conscientious objectors, then religious organizations that object to same-sex marriage could expect to face similar penalties under these more-restrictive laws.

A related concern exists with respect to licensing and accreditation decisions. In Massachusetts, for example, the state threatened to revoke the adoption license of Boston Catholic Charities because it refused on religious grounds to place foster children with

&lt;sup>25</sup> The Boy Scouts announced that, effective January 1, 2014, they would no longer "deny[] membership to youth on the basis of sexual orientation alone," Boy Scouts of America Statement, Boy Scouts of America (May 23, 2013), http://www.scouting.org/MembershipStandards/Resolution/results.aspx. However, the Scouts did not change their adult membership or youth conduct standards. Id.

&lt;sup>26</sup> Boy Scouts of Am. v. Till, 136 F. Supp. 2d 1295 (S.D. Fla. 2001).

&lt;sup>27</sup> Evans v. City of Berkeley, 129 P.3d 394 (Cal. 2006)

&lt;sup>28</sup> Cradle of Liberty Council, Inc. v. City of Philadelphia, 851 F. Supp. 2d 936, 939 (E.D. Pa. 2012).

same-sex couples. Rather than violate its religious beliefs, Catholic Charities shut down its adoption services.<sup>29</sup>

Similarly, religious colleges and universities have been threatened with the loss of accreditation because they object to sexual conduct outside of opposite-sex marriage. For example, the American Psychological Association, the government-designated accrediting body for professional psychology education programs, threatened to revoke the accreditation of religious colleges that prefer coreligionists, in large part because of concerns about "codes of conduct that prohibit sex outside of marriage and homosexual behavior." Where same-sex marriage is adopted without strong religious protections, religious colleges and universities that oppose same-sex marriage likely will face similar threats.

In a similar vein, religious universities, charities, hospitals, and social service organizations often serve secular government purposes through contracts and grants. For instance, religious colleges participate in state funded financial aid programs, religious counseling services provide marital counseling and substance abuse treatment, and religious homeless shelters care for those in need. Although many of those organizations do not discriminate with regard to the beneficiaries of the services they provide, they may have internal personnel policies that require the employees who provide those services to comply with the organizations' religious beliefs.

&lt;sup>29</sup> Patricia Wen, "They Cared for the Children": Amid Shifting Social Winds, Catholic Charities Prepares to End Its 103 Years of Finding Homes for Foster Children and Evolving Families, Boston Globe, June 25, 2006 (Catholic Charities had to choose between following Church beliefs and continuing to offer social services); cf. 102 Mass. Code Regs. §§ 1.03(1), 5.04(1)(c); 110 Mass. Code Regs. § 1.09(2) (regulations requiring non-discrimination based upon marital status and sexual orientation).

&lt;sup>30</sup> D. Smith, Accreditation committee decides to keep religious exemption, 33 Monitor on Psychology 16 (Jan. 2002) (describing why APA ultimately abandoned proposal).

Many contracts and grants require recipients to be organized "for the public good" and forbid recipients to act "contrary to public policy." If same-sex marriage is recognized without specific accommodations for religious organizations, those organizations that refuse to approve, subsidize, or perform same-sex marriages could be found to violate such standards, thus disqualifying them from participation in government contracts and grants. In the marriage context, religious universities that oppose same-sex marriage could be denied access to government programs (such as scholarships, grants, or tax-exempt bonds) by governmental agencies that adopt an aggressive view of applicable antidiscrimination standards.

Religious organizations opposed to same-sex marriage also face debarment from government social service contracts. Catholic Charities in the District of Columbia was forced to stop providing foster care services due to its religious beliefs regarding the recognition of same-sex marriages.<sup>31</sup> If same-sex marriage is given legal recognition without accommodation for religious objectors, then many religious organizations will be forced either to extend benefits to same-sex spouses against their religious beliefs or be debarred from government social services contracts.<sup>32</sup>

&lt;sup>31</sup>Michelle Boorstein, Citing same-sex marriage bill, Washington Archdiocese ends foster-care program, Wash. Post, Feb. 17, 2010.

Without adequate conscience protections, the charitable tax exempt status of many religious institutions could be stripped by local governments based solely on that religious institution's conscientious objection to same-sex marriage. See, e.g., Bob Jones Univ. v. United States, 461 U.S. 574 (1983) (rejecting Free Exercise Clause defense to IRS withdrawal of 501(c)(3) status based on religious belief against interracial dating and marriage as being contrary to a compelling government public policy).

The conflict between same-sex marriage and religious liberty affects individual religious believers as well. As we noted above, the California Supreme Court voted that, as of January 2016, California state judges are barred from belonging to youth organizations that "invidiously discriminate," apparently with the Boy Scouts of America in mind.<sup>33</sup> The situation is similarly acute for state-employed professionals like social workers who face a difficult choice between their conscience and their livelihood.<sup>34</sup> Unless adequate protections for conscientious objectors are allowed to remain, conflicts like these will be even more widespread as religious believers' long-held views on marriage suddenly become prima facie evidence of discriminatory animus under anti-discrimination laws.

&lt;sup>32</sup> See, e.g., Catholic Charities of Maine, Inc. v. City of Portland, 304 F. Supp. 2d 77 (D. Me. 2004) (upholding ordinance forcing religious charity either to extend employee spousal benefit programs to registered same sex couples, or lose access to all city housing and community development funds).

&lt;sup>33</sup> See Thomas Curwen, State high court's vote affecting Scout affiliation stirs debate anew, L.A. Times, Jan. 24, 2015; Cal. Code Jud. Ethics, Canon 2C, Advisory Committee Commentary.

2. Private plaintiff lawsuits targeting religious defendants

If this Court holds that the Fourteenth Amendment requires a state to license a marriage between two people of the same sex, then the distinction between opposite-sex marriage and other legal relationships would constitute unlawful discrimination. In that situation, a proliferation of potential private discrimination actions could arise if the Court does not equally recognize the need for accommodations for conscientious objectors.

Religious institutions often provide a broad array of programs and facilities to their members and to the general public, such as hospitals, schools, adoption services, and marital counseling. Religious institutions typically enjoy some latitude in choosing what religiously-motivated services and facilities they will offer. But according legal recognition to same-sex marriage without robust conscience exemptions will restrict that freedom in at least two ways.

First, as shown in the Appendix, many states have public accommodations laws that ban discrimination on the basis of gender, marital status, or sexual orientation. See Appendix 2a-39a. Second, religious institutions and their related ministries are facing increased risk of being declared places of public accommodation, and thus being subject to legal regimes designed to regulate secular businesses. See, e.g., Hutchinson, Kan. Human Relations Commission, Definitions and FAQs under Proposed Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity Protections 4 (2012). When coupled with legally-recognized same-sex marriage, these two facts create significant liability risk for religious objectors.

&lt;sup>34</sup> Robin Fretwell Wilson, A Matter of Conviction: Moral Clashes Over Same-Sex Adoption, 22 BYU J. Pub. L. 475 (2008) (describing dismissals and resignations of social service workers where conscience protections were not provided).

Some of the many religiously-motivated services that could be "public accommodations" are: marriage counseling, family counseling, job training programs, child care, gyms and day camps,<sup>36</sup> life coaching, schooling,<sup>37</sup> adoption services,<sup>38</sup> and the use of wedding ceremony facilities.<sup>39</sup>

<sup>35</sup> http://www.hutchgov.com/egov/docs/1332537777_170654.pdf.

&lt;sup>36</sup> See Melissa Walker, YMCA rewrites rules for lesbian couples, Des Moines Register, Aug. 6, 2007 (city forced YMCA to change its definition of "family" or lose grant).

&lt;sup>37</sup> See Gay Rights Coal. of Georgetown Univ. Law Ctr. v. Georgetown Univ., 536 A.2d 1 (D.C. 1987) (en banc) (public accommodations statute required equivalent access to all university facilities.).

&lt;sup>38</sup> See Butler v. Adoption Media, LLC, 486 F. Supp. 2d 1022 (N.D. Cal. 2007) (Arizona adoption facilitation website was public accommodation under California law).

&lt;sup>39</sup> See Bernstein v. Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Ass'n, No. DCR PN34XB-03008 (N.J. Off. of Att'y Gen., Div. on Civil Rts., Oct. 23, 2012) (Methodist organization violated public accommodations law by denying same-sex couples use of wedding pavilion because it opened pavilion for other weddings).

In a different context, religious colleges and universities frequently provide student housing and often give special treatment to married couples. Legally married same-sex couples could reasonably be expected to seek these benefits, but many religious educational institutions would conscientiously object to providing support for same sex unions. Housing discrimination lawsuits would result. See Levin v. Yeshiva Univ., 754 N.E.2d 1099 (N.Y. 2001) (lesbian couple stated valid disparate impact sexual orientation discrimination claim).

Finally, religious organizations that object to same-sex marriage may also face private lawsuits when one of their employees enters into a civilly-recognized same-sex marriage. For many religious institutions, an employee's entering a same-sex marriage would constitute a public repudiation of the institution's core religious beliefs in a way that less public relationships do not. Some employers will respond by changing the terms of employment for those employees. These employees may then sue under laws prohibiting gender, sexual orientation, or marital status discrimination in employment.<sup>40</sup> If the employee is a "minister," or the relevant statute includes an exemption, then the defendant religious employer could raise an affirmative defense.41 But where the employee does not qualify as a minister and no legislative exemption is in place, the employer will be exposed to liability for any alleged adverse employment action.

 $<sup>^{40}</sup>$  See Tenn. Code Ann. § 4-21-401 (gender); Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. 37.2202 (gender and marital status); Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 344.040 (gender); Ohio Rev. Code Ann. §§ 4112.02(A), 3301.53(A)(3) (gender); see also Appendix.

&lt;sup>41</sup> See, e.g., Hosanna-Tabor, 132 S. Ct. at 707; Spencer v. World Vision, Inc., 633 F.3d 723, 724 (9th Cir. 2011) cert. denied, 132 S. Ct. 96 (2011) (applying Title VII's religious exemption).

3. The need for accommodation

The foregoing examples are by no means exhaustive. They suffice to make clear, however, that these religious liberty disputes arise across a wide range of factual circumstances. They also demonstrate that according legal recognition to same-sex marriage without providing robust religious liberty protections will create conflicts that would work a "sea change in American law" and "reverberate across the legal and religious landscape."<sup>42</sup>

As discussed above, the states that have adopted same-sex marriage by legislative action all have sought to moderate these potential conflicts between allowing same-sex marriage and religious liberty by providing accommodations for conscientious objectors. This form of rational balancing should be encouraged, not obliterated, by a ruling that characterizes them as based on "animus" or "invidious discrimination." As noted by Professor Laycock:

[U]navoidable conflict [between the interests of same-sex couples and the interests of conscientious objectors] does not necessarily mean unmanageable conflict. For the most part, these conflicts are not zero-sum games, in which every gain for one side produces an equal and opposite loss for the other side. If legislators and judges will treat both sides with respect, harm to each side can be minimized. Of course, that is a huge "if."

&lt;sup>42</sup> Marc D. Stern, Same-Sex Marriage and the Churches, in Emerging Conflicts 1, 1.

Douglas Laycock, Afterword, in Emerging Conflicts 189, 196.

In addressing whether the Fourteenth Amendment requires a state to license a marriage between two people of the same sex, the Court should allow room for the religious liberty implications of its ruling to be addressed both by the states (in crafting future legislation) and by the courts in future cases.

III. Treating conscientious objection to samesex marriage as "animus" or "invidious discrimination" would place in serious jeopardy hundreds of existing laws designed to protect religious liberty.

In these appeals, the Court will resolve whether the Fourteenth Amendment requires a state to license a marriage between two people of the same sex. On that narrow legal question neither amicus takes a position.

But given the number and scope of state laws that seek to prohibit discrimination and protect religious liberty, the weightier issue for advocates of religious liberty focuses on the manner in which the Court will arrive at its conclusion in these cases. Should the Court decide that Respondents' marriage laws are necessarily based on "animus" or "invidious discrimination," then many— if not all— of the existing laws designed to accommodate religious conscientious objections would be placed in serious jeopardy. Such a ruling also would place at risk future accommodations for religious liberty.

Yet religious liberty protections for people in this category are not a manifestation of animus, but simply a recognition that beliefs about these matters are important, often "define the attributes of person-hood," and should be formed without "compulsion of the State." Lawrence v. Texas, 539 U.S. 558, 574 (2003). Religious people should be given room to define their own concepts of "meaning" just as other citizens do. Ibid. The Court should therefore carefully consider the inevitable impact its holding will have on laws designed to protect the rights of religious conscientious objectors.

A. The Court's equal protection jurisprudence does not provide a clear method of analysis to resolve these appeals.

The hallmark of this Court's equal protection analysis is the use of a multi-tiered analytical framework. Although well-established, this methodology does not predetermine the manner in which the Court will decide the question before it.

Under the tiered equal protection inquiry, most legislative classifications receive "rational basis review" and will be upheld if the courts discern that the classification is "rationally related to a legitimate state interest." City of Cleburne, Tex. v. Cleburne Living Ctr., 473 U.S. 432, 440 (1985) (citing cases). Classifications that involve a suspect class or burden a fundamental right are subject to "strict scrutiny" and will be upheld only if they are "narrowly tailored" to achieve a "compelling" government interest. Parents Involved in Community Schools v. Seattle Sch. Dist. No. 1, 551 U.S. 701, 720 (2007). Finally, classifications burdening a few "semi-suspect classes" will be subject to "intermediate scrutiny" and will be upheld when they are found to be "substantially related" to the achievement of "important governmental objective[s]," United States v. Virginia, 518 U.S. 515, 524 (1996) (gender discrimination).

Although widely used, these three tiers are by no means the only lenses by which courts have viewed a challenged legislative classification. Some cases have articulated other standards that do not fit comfortably into the three-tier structure. For example, Gerald Gunther famously referred to a different standard known as rational basis with "bite." Similarly, some courts have applied "heightened scrutiny." This level of scrutiny appears to lie somewhere in between rational basis review and intermediate scrutiny, and has been applied by the lower courts in cases involving sexual orientation and gender identity Equal Protection claims.<sup>45</sup> In the Ninth Circuit's formulation, "when state action discriminates on the basis of sexual orientation, we must examine its actual purposes and carefully consider the resulting inequality to ensure that our most fundamental institutions neither send nor reinforce messages of stigma or second-class status." SmithKline, 740 F.3d at 483 (quoting Witt v. Dept. of the Air Force, 527 F.3d 806, 813 (9th Cir. 2008)).

&lt;sup>43</sup> Gerald Gunther, The Supreme Court, 1971 Term – Foreword: In Search of Evolving Doctrine on a Changing Court: A Model for a Newer Equal Protection, 86 Harv. L. Rev. 1, 20-22 (1972) (describing the difference between traditional rational basis review and a strengthened rationality scrutiny); see also Kenji Yoshino, Why the Court can strike down marriage restrictions under rational-basis review, SCOTUSblog (Aug. 23, 2011), http://www.scotusblog.com/2011/08/why-the-court-can-strike-down-marriage-restrictions-under-rational-basis-review/ (describing application of rational basis with "bite" to marriage challenges).

&lt;sup>44</sup> See SmithKline Beecham Corp. v. Abbott Labs., 740 F.3d 471, 481 (9th Cir. 2014) (classifications based on sexual orientation are subject to heightened scrutiny); Baskin v. Bogan, 766 F.3d 648, 656 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 135 S. Ct. 316, and cert. denied sub nom. Walker v. Wolf, 135 S. Ct. 316 (2014) (outlining but not ultimately relying on heightened scrutiny standard); Massachusetts v. U.S. Dept. of Health & Human Servs., 682 F.3d 1, 10 (1st Cir. 2012) ("Without relying on suspect classifications, Supreme Court equal protection decisions have both intensified scrutiny of purported justifications where minorities are subject to discrepant treatment and have limited the permissible justifications."), cert denied sub nom. Dept. of Health & Human Servs. v. Massachusetts, 133 S. Ct. 2887 (2013).

Relying on yet another proposed standard based on the concept of "animus" and this Court's holding in Romer v. Evans, 517 U.S. 620 (1996), some amici urge this Court to hold that statutes that do not allow for same-sex-marriage be struck down as motivated by "animus." Under this approach, a court would look to multiple factors to determine whether "animus" was present at the time a challenged provision had been enacted, including but not limited to: "(1) the law's text; (2) the political and legal context of its passage, including the legislative proceedings and history and evidence that can be gleaned from the sequence of events that led to passage; (3) the law's real-world impact or effects; and (4) the government's failure to offer legitimate objectives for the law along with means that truly advance those objectives."46 If these factors, collectively, allow a court to conclude that the law was enacted "not to further a proper legislative end but to make [gay people] unequal to everyone else," then the law must be struck down. HRC Br. 9 (quoting Romer, 517 U.S. at 635) (alteration in brief).

&lt;sup>45</sup> See supra note 44.

&lt;sup>46</sup> Brief of Human Rights Campaign et al., at 8 http://hrc-assets.s3-website-us-east-1.amazonaws.com//files/assets/resources/thepeoplesbrief.pdf ("HRC Brief") (draft brief posted online to solicit signatures).

This proposed standard fails both as an interpretation of Romer and because if adopted it would endanger many existing and future religious accommodation statutes.

In Romer, the Court applied rational basis review in an equal protection challenge to a sexual orientation classification. The Colorado Supreme Court had applied strict scrutiny to strike down a voter-approved referendum known as Amendment 2 that "prohibit[ed] all legislative, executive, or judicial action at any level of state or local government designed to protect the named class" of "homosexual persons or gays and lesbians." Id. at 624-625. But the Supreme Court declined to apply either strict or intermediate scrutiny and instead held that the referendum "fails, indeed defies, even this conventional inquiry" of whether a law bears a rational relation to some legitimate end. Id. at 632; see id. at 635 ("a law must bear a rational relationship to a legitimate governmental purpose, and Amendment 2 does not"). The Court further found that "a bare * * * desire to harm a politically unpopular group cannot constitute a legitimate governmental interest." Id. at 634-635 (quoting Dept. of Agriculture v. Moreno, 413 U.S. 528, 534 (1973)). Because that bare desire to harm was present in Colorado's adoption of Amendment 2, the law lacked even a rational basis.

Thus on its own terms, Romer does not prove as much as the proponents of the "animus" standard would have it do: it is quite a stretch to turn "a bare desire to harm" into a mere "want of careful reflection." Indeed, if mere "want of careful reflection" is enough to strike down voter propositions or legislatively-enacted statutes, then many more laws are at risk than those currently before the Court.

And Romer is more nuanced about government accommodations of religious conscientious objectors than the proponents of the animus argument make it out to be. Indeed, Romer expressly distinguishes laws like Amendment 2 from narrower religious accommodations, referring to protections for "the liberties of landlords or employers who have personal or religious objections to homosexuality" as potentially having "identifiable legitimate purpose[s] or discrete objective[s]." Romer, 517 U.S. at 635. On this reading, Romer would have been decided the other way had Amendment 2 merely required accommodations for religious objectors as opposed to banning state and municipal sexual orientation anti-discrimination laws across the board.

But the Romer animus proposal is not just a poor interpretation of Romer. As set out below, the proposed Romer animus standard would also endanger hundreds of existing religious accommodations.

B. If the Court were to rely on "animus" or "invidious discrimination" as its form of analysis, existing state and local religious liberty protections would be threatened.

If the Court invalidates opposite-marriage laws based on a level of scrutiny that relies on "animus" or "invidious discrimination," then existing state and local religious liberty protections would be threatened. We have already noted that these existing religious liberty protections include exemptions in public accommodation laws, housing discrimination laws, and employment discrimination laws. See supra Section I at nn. 12-19. Hundreds of religious liberty exemptions would thus be placed in jeopardy if the Court finds that all such classifications are based on "animus" or "invidious discrimination."

Applying this level of scrutiny, a court might simply dispense with the need to find any actual animosity towards gays or lesbians to strike down a state's religious exemption. Instead, a court might find only that there had been a "want of careful, rational reflection" HRC Br. at 6, or presume that any law accommodating conscientious objection to same-sex marriage automatically constitutes animus. Rather than merely endorse equality of marriage, such a holding would vilify religious organizations and authorities whose beliefs are inconsistent with same-sex marriage.

Finally, amici note that there is a strong argument that giving legal recognition to civil same-sex marriage without providing religious accommodations demonstrates animus towards religious people and institutions. Given the current state of the debate over same-sex marriage and religious liberty, no Member of Congress, legislator, or city councilperson can plausibly claim to be unaware that adopting same-sex marriage will have significant negative effects on the ability of religious conscientious objectors to participate fully in society. And just as employers ought not to be able to play dumb with respect to whether someone wearing a religious headscarf needs a religious accommodation, cf. EEOC v. Abercrombie & Fitch Stores, Inc., 731 F.3d 1106 (10th Cir. 2013), cert. granted, 135 S. Ct. 44 (2014), legislators should not be allowed to pretend that they are surprised to discover that religious people and institutions are deeply and adversely affected when same-sex marriage laws are enforced without robust religious protections.

CONCLUSION

This Court should rule in a way that acknowledges the importance of statutory exemptions for religious organizations and conscientious objectors.

Respectfully submitted.

ERIC C. RASSBACH

Counsel of Record

HANNAH C. SMITH

ASMA T. UDDIN

The Becket Fund for

Religious Liberty

1200 New Hampshire Ave., N.W.

Suite 700

Washington, DC 20036

(202) 955-0095

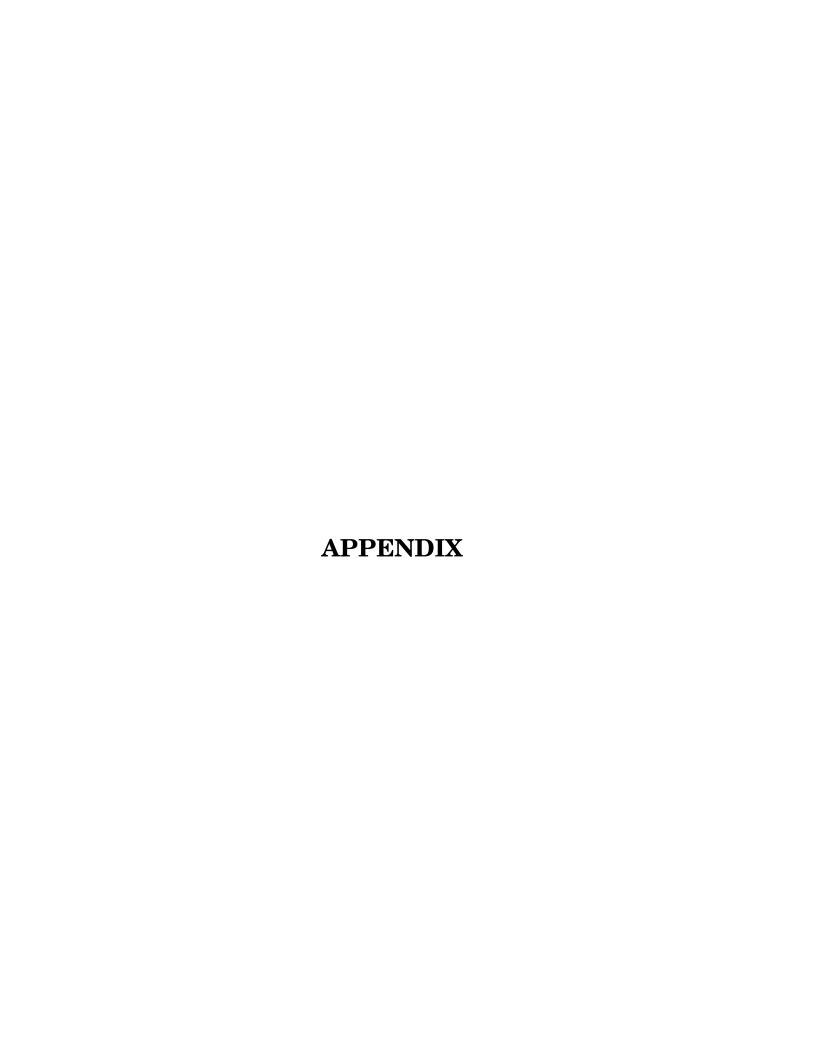

erassbach@becketfund.org

TODD McFarland Associate General Counsel Office of General Counsel General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists 12501 Old Columbia Pike Silver Spring, MD 20904

ANDREW G. SCHULTZ Rodey, Dickason, Sloan, Akin & Robb, P.A. 201 Third Street, NW Albuquerque, NM 87102

Counsel for Amici Curiae

MARCH 2015

Summary of Relevant Religious Exceptions by State

20	Number of states with Religious Freedom Restoration Acts
34	Number of states with anti-discrimination statutes that contain religious exceptions
36	Number of states protecting against marital status discrimination
50	Number of states protecting against gender discrimination
23	Number of states protecting against sexual orientation discrimination
50	Number of states with anti-discrimination statutes

Selected Anti-Discrimination Statutory Provisions and Relevant Religious Exceptions by State<sup>1</sup>

Note: Bolded statutes contain exceptions.

Statute	$rac{ ext{Protected}}{ ext{Categories}}$	Religious Exception
	ALABAMA*
ALA. CODE §§ 24-8-4	Sexual Orientation: Housing
*Religious Freedom	Gender:
RESTORATION ACT	Housing
LEGISLATION ("RFRA"):	Marital Status:
ALA. CONST. ART. I, § 3.01	Housing
(1999)

&lt;sup>1</sup> See Key on pages 37a-39a for explanation of numbers in "Religious Exception" column.

	Marital Status: Housing	123-316, 20-47-220, 20- 76-202, 21-12-103
	Social Services	123-311, 16-123-315, 16-
	Housing	123-206, 16-123-310, 16-
	Employment	11-225, 16-123-204, 16-
	Gender:	ARK. CODE ANN. §§ 11-
	ARKANSAS
	Housing
	Insurance Practices	1439.02 (1999)
	Marital Status:	ANN. §§ 41-1493 TO
	Government Contracts	*RFRA: ARIZ. REV. STAT.
	Housing
	Employment	1491.21, 42-3751
11	Public Accommodation	1491.15, 41-1491.20, 41-
	Voting	41-1464, 41-1491.14, 41-
	Insurance Practices	1442, 41-1462, 41-1463,
	Gender:	20-632.01, 41-1421, 41-
	Insurance Practices	ARIZ. REV. STAT. ANN. §§
	Sexual Orientation:
	ARIZONA*

§ 16721 220, 221, 230, 51500, CAL. CIV. CODE §§ 51, 51.5, 53, 782.5 12995§§ 11135, 12920, 12921, 66270, 66271 Cal. Educ. Code §§ 200, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code CAL. GOV'T CODE 12940, 12944, 12955, 12922, 12926, 12926.2, Sexual Orientation: CALIFORNIA Juvenile Detention Commerce Public Accommodation Government Contracts Foster Care Social Services Housing Employment Social Services Education Insurance Practices 8, 12, 13

8, 13	Education Employment Housing Insurance Practices Government Contracts Public Accommodation Commerce	CODE §§ 224.71, 16001.9, 16013
8, 12, 13	Education Social Services Employment Housing Insurance Practices Social Services Foster Care Government Contracts Public Accommodation Commerce Juvenile Detention	Cal Health & Safety Code §§ 1365.5, 1502.35, 1522.41, 1529.2 Cal. Ins. Code §§ 10119.6, 10140 Cal. Pub. Cont. Code § 2500, 6108 Cal. Welf. & Inst.

									COL	601	109 94-34-509 94-3 4-	210, 12-04-104, 12-04-	910 19 84 104 19 84	COLO DENT CHAM 88 % 9
Provision of Funeral	Extension of Credit	Marital Status:	Insurance Practices	Public Accommodation	Housing	Employment	Foster Care	Services/Cremation	Provision of Funeral	Extension of Credit	Gender:	Insurance Practices	Public Accommodation	Housing	Employment	Foster Care	Services/Cremation	Provision of Funeral	Extension of Credit	Sexual Orientation:	Colorado
	9						8, 9									8, 9

Services/Cremation
Housing
Public Accommodation
Insurance Practices

	CONNECTICUT*
CONN. GEN. STAT. §§ 4a-60, 4a-60a, 10-15c, 45a-	Sexual Orientation: Employment
726a , 46a-59, 46a-60,	Public Accommodation
46a-60a 46a-64, 46a-64c,	Housing
46a-66, 46a-7146a-76,	Government Contracts
46a-81c, 46a-81d, 46a-	Professional Organizations	1 2 1 7
81e46a-81n, 4 6a-81p ,	Extension of Credit	14, 10
46a-81aa , 81b	State Agency Services
	State Benefits
*RFRA: CONN. GEN.
STAT. ANN. § 52-571b
	Gender & Gender Identity:
	Employment
	Housing
	Public Accommodation
	Government Contracts	14, 15
	Professional Organizations
	State Agency Services
	State Benefits
	Extension of Credit

		DEL. CODE ANN. TIT. XXV, §5116
	Public Accommodation Employment	Del. Code Ann. tit. xxix, § 6519A
	Marital Status:	§§ 2304, 4124
	Employment	DEL CODE ANN. TIT. XVII,
	Public Accommodation	3 1 1
	Gender & Gender Identity:	Del. Code Ann. tit. xix,
	Employment
	Public Accommodation	4605, 4606, 4619
	Housing	§§ 4504, 4603, 4604,
	Sexual Orientation:	Del. Code Ann. Tit. VI,
	DELAWARE
	State Benefits
	State Agency Services
c	Extension of Credit
IJ	Housing
	Employment
	Marital Status:

	FLORIDA*
	Gender:
	Government Contracts
	Commerce
	Public Accommodation
	Employment
	Housing
FLA. STAT. §§ 110.181,	State Employees'
287.134, 446.51, 542.34,	Charitable Campaign
760.08, 760.10, 760.23,	Club Membership
760.24, 760.25, 760.26,	Education
760.60, 1000.05	Social Services
	Marital Status:
*RFRA: FLA. STAT. ANN.	Public Accommodation
§§ 761.01 TO 761.05	Employment
	Housing
	State Employees'
	Charitable Campaign
	Club Membership
	Education
	Social Services

204, 45-19-29, 45-19-30, 45-19-31, 43-39A-18
Marital Status: Extension of Credit Housing Foster Parents	Employment Extension of Credit Housing Foster Parents	GEORGIA

																		_
												515-16, 516-62, 612-2	4, 515-5, 515-6, 515-7,	378-2, 489-3, 515-3, 515 -	64, 246-12.2, 302A-1001,	HAW. REV. STAT. §§ 171-
Housing Employment	Marital Status:	Jury Service	Employment	Funds	Using State Facilities or	Education and Recreation	Golf Course	Use of Public Lands	Housing	Public Accommodation	Gender & Gender Identity:		Employment	Housing	Public Accommodation	Sexual Orientation:	Hawaii
ယ						c	ပ							ဃ

8 8 11 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1
IDAHO CODE ANN. §§ 16- 2402, 18-7301, 18-7303, 67-5909, 67-5910 *RFRA: IDAHO CODE ANN. §§ 73-401 TO -404
Gender: Employment Public Accommodation Education Housing Employment and Health Services	IDAHO*
4, 9

	ILLINOIS* Sexual Orient
775 Ill. Comp. Stat. §§ 5/2-101 , 5/2-102, 5/2- 105, 5/3-103, 5/3-105,	Sexual Orientation: Employment Public Accommodation Housing Government Contracts Extension of Credit
5/4-102, 5/4-103, 5/5- 101, 5/5-102, 10/110/7, 15/3, 15/5, 20/3 205 Ill. Comp. Stat. § 635/3-8	Gender: Employment Public Accommodation Housing Government Contracts Commerce
*RFRA: Ill. Comp. Stat. § 35/1-99	Marital Status: Employment Public Accommodation Housing
	Housing Government Contracts

Т
IND. CODE §§ 22-9-1-2, 22-9-1-3, 22-9.5-5-14, 5-16-6-1,16-23-1-21, 24- 9-3-9, 20-24-2-2, 20-25.5- 4-1, 22-9-1-10, 35-46-2-2
Gender: Housing Education Employment Public Accommodation Government Contracts Hospitals Commerce Jury Selection Marital Status: Housing Commerce	Indiana
6

	Iowa
	Sexual Orientation: Employment
	Public Accommodation	1, 2, 16
	Housing
	Education
IOWA CODE §§ 216.6,	Gender & Gender Identity:
216.6A, 216.7 , 216.8,	Employment
216.8A, 216.9 , 216.10,	Public Accommodation	1 9 16
216.11, 216.11A, 216.12 ,	Housing	1, 2, 10
216.12A, 537.3311,	Education
607A.2 729.4	Jury Service
	Marital Status:
	Employment
	Public Accommodation	1, 2, 16
	Housing
	Education

	Kansas*
KAN. STAT. ANN. §§ 44-	Gender:
1001, 44-1002, 44-1009,	Employment
44-1016, 44-1017	Housing	0
	Public Accommodation	0, 9
*RFRA: 2013 KAN. SESS.
LAWS 155
	Kentucky*
Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§	Gender:
45.570, 344.040,	Employment
344.130, 344.555 ,	Housing	6
344.360, 344.362	Education
	Government Contracts
*RFRA: KY. REV. STAT.	Marital Status:
ANN. § 446.350	Housing

	Louisiana*
La. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 23:302, 23:332, 49:146 , 51:2247, 51:2606, 51:2607	Gender: Employment Public Accommodation Housing	6
*RFRA: LA. REV. STAT. ANN. §§ 13:5231 TO 13:5242

	4553, A, 45 4592,	ME
	4553, 4571, 4572, 4573- A, 4581, 4581-A, 4591, 4592, 4602	DEV. CHAN 88 784
Marital Status: Education	Gender: Employment Housing Public Accommodation Education Government Contracts	Sexual Orientation: Employment Housing Public Accommodation Education	MAINE
Оī	7	1, 2, 7, 10

	MARYLAND
	Sexual Orientation: Employment
	Housing	1
	Public Accommodation
	Government Contracts
Mn Cone Anni 88 19	Gender & Gender Identity:
114 19_311 90_309 90_	Employment
304 90 409 90 609 30	Housing
604 90 605 90 606 90	Public Accommodation
709 90-703	Licensed Social Workers
102, 20-100	Government Contracts
	Marital Status:
	Employment
	Housing	1
	Public Accommodation
	Government Contracts

	Extension of credit
3, 4	Housing
	Marital Status:
	Extension of Credit
	Housing	151B §§ 1, 4
3, 4	Employment	Mass. Ann. Laws Ch.
	Public Accommodation
	Gender & Gender Identity:	272 §§ 92A, 98
	Extension of Credit	Mass. Ann. Laws Ch.
	Housing
3, 4	Employment
	Public Accommodation
	Sexual Orientation:
	MASSACHUSETTS

	Michigan
	Gender:
	Employment
	Housing
MICH. COMP. LAWS ANN.	Education
§§ 37.2202, 37.2209,	Government Contracts
37.2402, 37.2502,	Marital Status:
390.933	Employment
	Housing
	Education
	Government Contracts

	MINNESOTA
	Sexual Orientation: Employment
	Housing Public Accommodation	1, 2, 9, 10
Minn Char 88	Education
363 \ 09/1\/\) 363 \ 09	Business Relations
363A.UZ(1)(A), 363A.U8,	Gender:
969A 11 969A 19	Employment
969 17 969 A 90/9)	Housing
363A 91 363A 93	Public Accommodation
363 A 36	Education
303A.20	Marital Status:
	Employment
	Housing
	Public Accommodation
	Education

	Mississippi*
Miss. Code Ann. §§ 57- 10-519, 57-71-19, 57-77- 27	Gender: Business Loans
*RFRA: MISS. CODE ANN. § 11-61-1
	Missouri*
Mo. Rev. Stat. §§	Gender:
173.1102, 213.010(7) , 213.040, 213.055,	Employment Housing
213.065	Public Accommodation	8, 9
*1111 / 110 / 2111	Education
*RFRA: Mo. Ann. Stat.
§§ 1.302 to 1.307

	Montana
	Gender:
	Employment
	Housing
Mont. Code Ann. §§ 49-	Public Accommodation
2-303, 49-1-102, 49-2-	Education
304, 49-1-102, 49-2-305,	Marital Status:
49-2-307	Employment
	Housing
	Public Accommodation
	Education
	Nebraska
	Gender:
	Employment
NEB. REV ST. §§ 20-124,	Housing
20-132, 20-134, 20-318,	Public Accommodation
48-1104, 48-1122	Government Contracts
	Marital Status:
	Employment

	Housing
F	Public Accommodation
-1	Employment	613.350, 651.070
	Gender & Gender Identity:	613.320 , 613.330,
	Housing	118.093, 118.100,
F	Public Accommodation	NEV. REV. STAT. §§
_	Employment
	Sexual Orientation:
	NEVADA

	NEW HAMPSHIRE
	Sexual Orientation:
	Employment	1, 2, 3, 4,
	Housing	8,9
N.H. REV. STAT. ANN. §§	Public Accommodation
354-A:2(VII) & (XIV-c),	Gender:
354-A:6, 354-A:7, 354-	Employment	ο 2 / ο 0
A:8, 354-A:9, 354-A:10,	Housing	0, 4, 0, 5
354-A:16, 354-A:17, 354 -	Public Accommodation
A:18	Marital Status:
	Employment	o 2 0 0
	Housing	0, 4, 0, 5
	Public Accommodation

	NEW JERSEY
	Sexual Orientation:
	Employment
	Housing	3, 7, 9
	Public Accommodation
	Government Contracts
	Gender:
N.J. REV. STAT. §§ 10:1-	Employment
2, 10:1-3, 10:2-1, 10:5 -	Housing	3, 7, 9
5(l) & (n), 10:5-12	Public Accommodation
	Government Contracts
	Marital Status:
	Employment
	Public Accommodation	3, 7, 9
	Housing
	Government Contracts

	NEW MEXICO*
	Sexual Orientation: Employment Housing	1, 2, 3
N.M. STAT. ANN. §§ 28-1-	Public Accommodation
7, 28-1-9	Gender & Gender Identity: Employment	) )
	Housing	1, 2, 3
*RFRA: N.M. STAT. ANN.	Public Accommodation
§§ 28-22-1 TO -5	Marital Status:
	Employment	ည
	Housing	c
	Public Accommodation

	NEW YORK
	Sexual Orientation: Education
	Employment	4, 5
	Housing
	Public Accommodation
	Gender:
NY EXEC. LAW §§ 296,	Education
312	Employment	~ π
	Government Contracts	,
NY EDUC. LAW § 313	Housing
	Public Accommodation
	Marital Status:
	Education
	Employment	~ п
	Government Contracts	4, 0
	Housing
	Public Accommodation

⊢	NORTH CAROLINA
N.C. GEN. STAT. ANN. §§ 41A-4, 143-135.3	Gender: Housing Government Contracts
	NORTH DAKOTA
	Gender: Employment
N D CENT CODE 88 14	Housing
02.4–16, 14-02.4-14–16,	Licensing Public Accommodation
14-02.9-02-08, 23-17.3-	Marital Status:
Ç	Employment
	Housing
	Public Accommodation

	Оніо
	Gender:
	Housing
	Employment
OHIO REV. CODE ANN. §§	Public Accommodation
4112.02, 3301.53,	Social Services/
340.12, 1751.18, 3701.46	Government Contracts
	Marital Status:
	Social Services
	Government Contracts

	Окілнома*
OKLA. STAT. TIT. XXV, §§	Gender:
1302–1306, 1452, 1506.9	Employment
	Housing
OKLA. STAT. TIT. IIIA, §	Social Services
301	Public Accommodation
	Marital Status:
OKLA. STAT. ANN. TIT.	Social Services
XXV, § 1402, OKLA. STAT.
ANN. TIT. XLVII, § 1104.6
*RFRA: OKLA. STAT.
ANN. TIT. 51, §§ 251 TO 258

									099A.421, 099A.090	6504 491 6504 030	650 006 650 103	410.040, 440.700,	118 648 449 730	On Pevi Smart 88
Housing Social Services	Education	Marital Status:	Extension of Credit	Housing	Employment	Public Accommodation	Education	Gender:	Social Services	Housing	Employment	Public Accommodation	Education	Sexual Orientation:	OREGON
1, 2, 0, 1	1934				1, 2, 0, 4	1 9 2 /					1, 2, 0, 4	1 0 2 1

	PENNSYLVANIA*
43 PA. CONST. STAT. §§	Gender:
954, 955	Employment
	Housing	2 2
24 PA. CONST. STAT. §§	Public Accommodation	ે, 4, ૦
5002, 5004	Education
	Insurance Practices
35 Pa. Const. Stat. §	Marital Status:
448.804, 40 PA. CONST.	Insurance Practices
STAT. § 1171.5
*RFRA: 71 PA. CONST.
STAT. §§ 2401 TO 2407

		*RFRA: S.C. CODE ANN. §§ 1-32-10 TO -60
4	Employment Housing	80, 31-21-40
	Gender:	S.C. CODE ANN. §§ 1-13-
	SOUTH CAROLINA*
	Housing
	Commerce
	Marital Status:
	Education	88 42-00:1-1 10 -4
	Public Accommodation	88 49 80 1 1 mg 4
4	Housing	*PFP A: P   CENT   AVICE
	Employment	07-1-4, 20-9-0
	Gender & Gender Identity:	2, 20-5-1, 20-5.1-14, 54-
	Commerce	0 39 5 7 39 5 1 14 34
	Education	D I CEN I AND 88 11 94
4	Public Accommodation
	Employment
	Sexual Orientation:
	KHODE ISLAND*
	Dropp Toropp

	SOUTH DAKOTA
	Gender: Employment
S.D. CODIFIED LAWS §§	Housing	_
20-13-10, 20-13-18 , 20-	Public Accommodation	7
13-20, 20-13-22 , 20-13-	Education
23, 58-33-13.1	Insurance Practices
	Marital Status:
	Insurance Practices
	TENNESSEE*
TENN. CODE ANN. §§ 4-	Gender:
21-401, 4-21-501, 4-21-	Employment
601, 4-3-1412, 12-4-122,	Housing
4-21-405, 4-21-602	Public Accommodation	3, 4
	Education
*RFRA: TENN. CODE
ANN. § 4-1-407

TEXAS*
Gender: Employment
Jousing
UTAH*
Gender: Employment
Public Accommodation Housing	1, 2, 3, 4, 8, 9
	Employment Housing  UTAH*  Employment Employment Public Accommodation Housing

	VERMONT
	Sexual Orientation: Employment Housing Public Accommodation	1, 3, 4
VT. STAT. ANN. TIT. XXI, §§ 495 , 1621	Gender & Gender Identity: Employment	د
VT. STAT. ANN. TIT IX, §§	Housing Public Accommodation	c
49UZ , 40U3	Marital Status:
	Employment	1 2 /
	Housing	1, 0, 4
	Public Accommodation
	Virginia*
VA. CODE ANN. §§ 2.2-4201, 2.2-4311, 2.2-3903	Government Contracts
36-96.3	Employment
	Housing
*RFRA: VA. CODE ANN.
§§ 57-1 TO 57-2.1

ယ	Gender: Public Accommodation Employment Housing	W. VA. CODE §§ 5-11-9, 5- 11A-8
	WEST VIRGINIA
5, 8	Housing Employment
	Marital Status:
	Public Accommodation
0, 0	Employment	49.60.215, 49.60.040
π O	Housing	§§ 49.60.222, 49.60.180,
	Gender:	WASH. REV. CODE ANN.
	Public Accommodation
9, 0	Employment
π α	Housing
	Sexual Orientation:
	Washington

	Wisconsin
	Sexual Orientation: Housing
	Public Accommodation Employment
	Gender:
Wis. Stat. §§ 111.321,	Housing
111.36, 106.50, 106.52	Public Accommodation
	Employment
	Marital Status:
	Housing
	Public Accommodation
	Employment
	WYOMING
Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 27-9-	Gender: Public Accommodation	&
100, 27-3-102, 0-3-101	Employment

Key:

- orientation or gender identity. imposing discriminatory employment practices based upon sexual Religious or denominational institution or organization exempt from
- 2 orientation or gender identity. imposing discriminatory housing practices based upon sexual Religious or denominational institution or organization exempt from
- ယ religious or denominational principles for which it is established or discriminatory housing practices where doing so would promote the with a religious or denominational organization exempt from imposing operated, supervised or controlled by or that is operated in connection maintained. Religious or denominational institution or organization that is
- 4 maintained. the religious or denominational principles for which it is established or discriminatory employment practices, where doing so would promote with a religious or denominational organization exempt from imposing operated, supervised or controlled by or that is operated in connection Religious or denominational institution or organization that

- Ö by a bona fide religious corporation, association or society. Laws do not apply to education facility owned, controlled or operated
- 6 accommodation, or facility based upon gender. Religious educational institution may deny access to any area,
- .7 applicants and employees conform to its religious tenets Religious corporation, association, or society may require
- $\infty$ 9. associations, and societies. institutions, "Employer" does not include certain religious or denominational entities, corporations, educational institutions,
- principally used for religious purposes. fraternal or social association or corporation, or any place that is "Public accommodations" do not include a religious or nonprofit
- 10. gender identity. discriminatory education practices based upon sexual orientation or Religious or denominational organization exempt from imposing ethical principles.

infertility treatment in a manner inconsistent with religious and

- 11. upon gender. exempt from imposing discriminatory employment practices based Religious corporation, association, educational institution or society
- 12. 13. identity. education practices based upon sexual orientation, gender, or gender Religious educational institution exempt from imposing discriminatory Religious organization exempt from providing insurance coverage for
- 14. or ecclesiastical rule, custom or law, based upon gender identity. practices concerning matters of discipline, faith, internal organization society exempt from imposing discriminatory employment practices or Religious corporation, entity, association, educational institution or
- 15. orientation of the parents. where to place a child for adoption or foster care based upon sexual exempt from imposing discriminatory practices when considering State, or state-licensed or state-approved, child-placing agency is

Religious institution exempt from imposing discriminatory public accommodation practices based upon sexual orientation or gender identity.

16.